Army, Navy Chiefs Insist Draft Quotas Must Stand

Marshall and King Remind Congress Of Pending New Assaults on Enemy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Chiefs of staff of the United States armed forces yesterday warned Congress not to interfere by cuts in draft quotas with hazardous new "follow up" blows at the Axis in virtually every war theater.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, and Admiral Ernest J. King, commander of the fleet, told a joint House-Senate Military Committee the United Nations are now entering the period of heaviest fighting, and must have their manpower on schedule.

"If you cut us now, we will suffer a heavier loss than we anticipate from Germany or Japan," General Marshall told the joint committees. "We are on the offensive, and must do nothing to dim the power of that offensive."

Battle Hazards to Grow

Said Admiral King:

"Battle hazards are going to increase in the Pacific, because we are going to expose ourselves there to hazards, having the means to do it."

The Nation's highest ranking military and naval officers testified on the Wheeler no-father-draft bill, but made it plain they were asking for qualified military-age men—whether they were fathers or not was immaterial from the strictly military standpoint.

They accepted the word of Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, that 446,000 fathers would have to be drafted January 1 to meet their timetables—246,000 for the Army, 200,000 for the Navy.

Can't Afford Emotions

As a military man, Marshall said he could not afford to have emotions on the father draft issue. If young, childless men could be supplied without slowing war production, he said, they would serve as well, or perhaps better.

"But," asked the general, "does a man by marrying free himself of any responsibility for the defense of his country? As a citizen, I shouldn't think only bachelors should wage this war."

The peak strength of the Wheeler bill was already on the wane when the two staff chiefs appeared before the committee. An unofficial survey for the leadership indicated votes were already in hand to defeat the measure, although many Senators were still uncommitted.

Last night the leadership considered seizing the initiative, probably early next week, on a motion to send the bill back to committee. Indications were this motion would receive an even larger vote.

The House Military committee will meet today to consider fathers draft strategy, but is expected to mark time until after the Wheeler bill vote. Chairman Andrew J. May said there would be no point in calling up his own measures if the Senate kills the Wheeler bill.

Warning by LaGuardia

Technically, the Wheeler bill will be before the Senate today, but leaders reached an agreement with the author to let debate go over until tomorrow so Senators can study published testimony.

Another influential witness remained to be heard. Bernard M. Baruch, War Mobilization adviser, whose recent manpower report argued against taking key childless men out of war plants to avoid the father draft, will be called before the Senate group today or tomorrow.

Sandwiched between yesterday's statements by Marshall and King, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York urged legislators to guard essential municipal police, fire,

7 of White House Guard to Get Promotions at Army Show

(District reaches 51.9 per cent of bond goal.)

Seven white-leggined privates of the crack White House guard will receive their promotions to warrant officers today at the 'Back The Attack' show on the Monument grounds, after the colorful ceremonies marking the changing of the White House Guard.

The presentation will be made by Brig. Gen. Robert H. Wylie, acting chief of transportation.

Transportation Day at the gigantic Army show will be celebrated today and for this reason the honor of presenting the warrants to the enlisted men in the White House guard will be given to General Wylie.

Also following the stately ritual of the changing of the guard, mobile portions of the Technical Services display will be moved into the arena for exhibition and demonstration.

This portion of the show will be in sharp contrast to the snappy military precision of the guard mount as members of the 15-month-old corps will be called upon to give a workmanlike demonstration of the manner in which they are called upon to handle their unglamorous ships, locomotives, box cars, harbor boats, and pier and warehouse equipment.

A distinguished guest of the Army Show command today at 10:30 a. m. will be Lieut. Gen. G. N. MacReady, chief of staff of the British Army contingent in Washington. General MacReady will be accompanied by his aides, Col. M. R. R. Prentice and Capt. P. W. English-West, in a special tour of the grounds and equipment of the Ordnance Department.

Weather permitting the show will go on today at scheduled hours, 2:15 p. m. for the afternoon displays and at 8:15 in the evening, with all tented and roofed over exhibits to be open as usual.

Inclement weather last night forced a cancellation of the 12th nightly showing of the Army's "Back the Attack" spectacle on Monument grounds.

Evening performance of the gigantic displays of mobile equipment, war dogs, antiaircraft firing demonstrations, simulated warfare and wounded rescues among the show's varied and thrilling items, were called off shortly

WFA to Begin Milk Sales Control Oct. 1

New Customers to Be Hardest Hit; No Rationing Planned

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The War Food Administration's plan for controlling sales of milk will go into effect October 1 in 18 of 23 Federal marketing areas, including Washington, it was disclosed yesterday.

New customers will be hardest hit by the program, which is designed to hold sales at or near recent levels and prevent "eager" consumers from getting more than their share of a food that has increased in popularity as other foods went under rationing.

Point rationing of milk is not contemplated, WFA stressed, and will be put into effect in an area only when and if the control-of-sales plan fails to work.

Details of the Washington plan are expected to be announced this week, with June as the base month to which sales will be held. George Irvine, milk marketing administrator for this area, said last night he did not believe consumers having milk delivered to their home or buying it regularly at neighborhood stores would notice any difference.

2-Way Responsibility

Responsibility for holding down sales and securing equitable distribution will rest with merchants and the dairy industry. Irvine declared he believed rationing would be unnecessary in this milkshed because the industry would work cooperatively to avoid it. He said he also felt sure adjustments would be made from time to time to allow for population increases.

Special provisions will be made to assure adequate deliveries to and to persons on special milk diets families with children, hospitals, recommended by physicians.

July Report Charges Misappropriation of Hospital Property

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer.

Charges of misappropriation of hospital property by Gallinger Municipal Hospital officials and employes were made as long ago as July in a report to the District Commissioners from the office of the Comptroller General of the United States, it was revealed yesterday by Chairman McCarran of the District Committee.

The Nevada Senator's announcement declared: "Many of the irregularities noted by the representatives of the Comptroller General's office are individually minor in nature, but nevertheless, have the definite cumulative effect of indicating clearly a rather prevalent disregard of property rights among certain officials on the Gallinger staff.

"Loose management, and inadequate control of matters affecting property and accounts also are most clearly indicated. Particularly significant, it seems to me, are certain charges concerning Dr. (Edgar A.) Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger . . . that he has converted to his personal use property belonging to the hospital; that he had purchased foodstuffs for his personal use from a fund author-

Churchill Meets With Cabinet and Reports on Trip

London, Sept. 20 (AP).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill presided at a cabinet meeting tonight and reportedly made a full report of the Quebec-Washington war conferences, and possibly discussed his coming appearance before Parliament.

Churchill is expected to take the floor almost as soon as Parliament reconvenes, and describe the progress of the war and the forthcoming tripartite conference, as well as answer questions on the lapse of time between the capture of Sicily and the invasion of the mainland.

His return probably will act to speed a British-Soviet-American conference. Speculation has grown here that the meeting will take place next month, possibly in Moscow. W. Averell Harriman, lend-lease supervisor in Britain, has been widely mentioned as a possible American representative.

Nelson Bars Contracts In 59 Areas

Directive Cites Lack of Labor As Compelling Output Factor

By Ben Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

In a sweeping action emphasizing the growing seriousness of the manpower problem, War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson yesterday outlawed the placing of additional war contracts in 59 critical labor stortage areas without a showing that the required items cannot be made elsewhere in time to meet the demands of the war program.

In the same ruling, Nelson flatly forbade Government procurement officers to let any contract "requiring increases in employment" in the West Coast region without the expressed permission of himself or a designated representative. It was learned that this phase of the ruling will be extended to the Hartford, Conn., area as soon as tight manpower and production controls similar to those imposed on the West Coast can be prepared.

The WPB directive replaced a previous procurement directive placing manpower third on a list of five factors to be considered in letting contracts.

Terms of New Directive

Under the new directive, "primary emphasis shall be upon securing deliveries or performance at the times required by the war program," but "subject to the requirement of delivery, it shall be the policy of all war procurement departments and agencies to avoid contracting for the production of items or materials in communities or areas in which labor shortages are known to exist, whenever it is practical to procure the needed items elsewhere."

To prevent procurement officers from using delivery dates as a means of getting around the manpower requirement, it was specified that "creation of unnecessary inventories" should be avoided.

Tudor Bowen, director of the WPB Procurement Policy Division, explained that the new policy also would apply in reverse whenever portions of the war program are "cut back."

Put in New Category

"Whenever demand for an item diminishes," Bowen said, "contracts will be terminated in labor shortage areas before other areas, thus releasing labor for more important jobs in the places where it is most needed."

The need for facilities which ranked ahead of manpower in the original directive issued in October, 1942, was placed in a third category along with the needs of

Russians Seize 1130 Places; Trap Threatens Nazis At Dnieper Bend

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Tuesday), Sept. 21.—The Red army overran more than 1130 villages yesterday, flanking the German central anchor at Smolensk and cutting the Kiev-Chernigov highway and the railway into the Crimea, amid signs that the enemy was abandoning the Caucasus.

A Moscow communique also disclosed early today a vast Red army wheeling movement aimed at Cherkasy, on the middle Dnieper, southeast of Kiev, in an effort to trap hundreds of thousands of enemy troops in the river bend. One Red army unit was within 40 miles of the Cherkasy area, key to the extensive rail network in the bend.

East of the bend, the Red army reached a point only 8 miles from Melitopol, after snapping the Crimean escape railway between Zaporozhe and Dniepropetrovsk, and capturing a town only 15 miles from the Dnieper, said the broadcast communique recorded by the Soviet monitor.

Caucasian Withdrawal Seen

Red airmen of the Black Sea fleet, the bulletin said, sank a German mine sweeper and three troop barges along the south side of the Taman Peninsula above recaptured Novorossisk, indicating an enemy withdrawal from the narrow Caucasian foothold.

Nearly 10,000 Germans were declared killed by the pursuing Russians along a 750-mile front in an accelerated drive that has swept up more than 3000 villages and towns in three days.

Velizh, 65 miles northwest of Smolensk, fell as the Russians also drove to within 300 miles on the northeast. Front reports relayed from Moscow said the Red army imperiling that German bastion was moving steadily through swamps and mine-filled forests, sometimes pulling artillery by hand as spearheading infantrymen and mortarmen demolished blockhouses and pillboxes.

Beyond fallen Bryansk, the Russians overran Kletnya, 45 miles to the west, in a race for White Russia, as other units farther south crossed the Snov River 40 miles from Novozybkov, a junction on the Bryansk-Gomel Railway.

Captive Russians Freed

"German troops were routed and dispersed," the communique said of the westward sweep beyond the broken Axis hinge at Bryansk. "They are being wiped out, unit by unit."

Roslavl, Cherikgov, Kiev, Poltava, Dnepropetrovsk, Cherkasy, Zaporozhe and Melitopol, all were menaced with early capture by the hard-hitting Soviet troops, whose advance was so swift that at one point near Poltava the communique said 16,000 Soviet civilians being herded westward for forced labor

Germans Rushing 30 Divisions To Defense of Italy, Balkans

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Germans were reported tonight to be rushing 30 divisions, aggregating more than 250,000 men, to Italy and the Balkans to protect their southern flank.

Twenty-four of the divisions were reportedly sent to the Balkans.

An informant in clandestine communication with Germany said 12 of the divisions were drawn from Hitler's strategic reserve behind the Russian front, while three were taken from Norway and one came from Holland. The other 14 were said to be of substandard quality, made up of youngsters, convalescents and middle-aged men drawn from the interior of Germany.

This would bring the German troop strength in Italy to about 24 divisions, while the forces sent to the Balkans would largely replace the 27 Italian garrison divisions lost to Hitler on Marshal Pietro Badoglio's surrender.

The Nazis acknowledged the loss of Sardinia—which could have been a strong barrier between Allied forces based in Africa and objectives in lower central Europe—although they claimed it was merely an evacuation.

Sardinia was the fifth island reported to have been swept up in recent days, Kos, Lenos, Sanos and Castellorize in the Aegean having fallen earlier into Allied control.

Possession of Sardinia gave the Allies a series of good airfields from which to attack northern Italy and southern Europe.

The British fleet was reported in the Aegean and this was heard with interest in view of recent rumors that the British Ninth army was on the move from the Middle East.

Powerful congressional friends of Gen. George C. Marshall strongly denounced yesterday any move to "promote him out" as Army chief of staff.

The general, himself, refused to discuss the weekend explosion of press and radio commentary touched off by an editorial in the Army and Navy Journal, which charged that unidentified "powerful interests" were gunning for him.

The service magazine asserted that a recurrent campaign to make General Marshall supreme Allied commander in Europe was, in reality, just camouflage covering efforts to ease him out of the Army's No. 1 spot.

The widely republished editorial rallied adherents of Marshall from Maxton, N. C., Sept. 20 (AP). Twenty-five soldiers died this morning in the crash of an Army transport plane on the Laurinburg-Maxton army air base field two miles from here, the public relations office announced.

The big ship, making a routine flight, burned after it struck earth.

"Names of those killed will be available for release after next of kin have been notified," the army said.

No other details of the crash were made available beyond an announcement that a board of inquiry had been appointed.

Officers said it was the first aircraft fatality at the field, which has been in operation more than a year.

Allied Planes Destroy Five Jap Bombers

94 Tons Hurled On Air Base at Cape Gloucester

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, Tuesday, Sept. 21.—New Guinea and New Britain bases of the Japanese most immediately menaced by Allied capture of airdromes at Lae and Salamaua have begun to rock under an increased weight of bombs.

Today's communique told of a 94-ton raid Sunday by Flying Fortresses and Liberators in considerable force on the enemy airdrome of Cape Gloucester, which is on the westernmost tip of New Britain, only about 120 miles northeast of Lae. These raiders, protected by fighters, all got home after wrecking five grounded enemy bombers and a fighter, and spreading fires so large they could be seen for 70 miles.

Steadily extending the target area of long-range fighters, which until recent months never appeared over New Britain, these units moved up the island' north coast to strafe an airdrome, supply dumps, antiaircraft positions and surface craft in the Kimbe Bay area.

Enemy Positions Strafed

Only 60 miles above newly-won Lae on the Huon Peninsula of New Guinea, Mitchells not only dropped 22 tons of bombs Sunday on airdromes and other targets, but also flew low so their gunners might strafe enemy occupied villages and surface craft near Finschafen.

In the jungles above Lae, into which enemy remnants retreated when that air base fell September 16, Allied forces blocking the trails have come into contact with the fugitives. Other troops are pressing them from behind.

Behind Lae, along the Markham River, some stragglers have been taken prisoner. Japanese who fled north from Salamaua after the air base fell on September 12 have been destroyed.

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 20.—With the American Fifth Army advanced to where it could see and fire upon Naples, French commandos took a hand tonight in the war upon the Germans by landing on the island of Corsica, joining with local patriots and striking hard at Nazi troops who had withdrawn to the island under pressure from Italian troops on neighboring Sardinia.

The Frenchmen stormed ashore on the key Mediterranean island less than 50 miles from the northern shores of the Nazi-held Italian mainland, and Gen. Henri Giraud, of the French high command, announced the fighting had taken "a favorable turn."

"Immediately after news of the Italian armistice had become known," Giraud said in his communique, "French Corsican patriots took up the fight against the Germans.

"French commandos were immediately landed to back up the patriots."

(International News Service said unconfirmed reports were that the patriots, assisted by Italians, had captured Corsica's capital and chief port, Ajaccio, on the west coast.

(A Reuters dispatch said the French commandos also had landed on Sardinia.)

The news of the French landing in Corsica, almost under the nose of the Germans and within range of enemy air forces in France and Italy, came a few hours after it was announced that Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army had captured the Sorrento Peninsula

78,946 Students Register Here As New School Year Opens

By Margaret Davis
Post Staff Writer

School opened yesterday for 78,946 District public school children, Boise L. Bristor, school statistician, reported last night. Another 7800 is expected to register by Monday, he said.

Many refrained from entering yesterday to finish up work on summer jobs. Others were delayed because parents put off opening interviews until this morning and did not have time to finish registration.

Increased enrollment in elementary schools balanced by decreases in senior high make this fall's enrollment figure about the same as last fall's, he said.

Totals were 3605 above those reported the opening day last September, however, because between 3500 to 4000 Jewish students observing Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur entered several days late in 1942.

Elementary school rosters exceeded last year's figure by 3,088 more than 500 of whom were Negro. Dr. Carroll Reed, in charge of white elementary schools, said he assumed the rise reflected Washington's increased population.

Although senior high schools showed an increase of 99 students and junior highs of 413, these figures were not considered real increases in view of the Jewish holiday factor in last year's totals.

Officials seemed to think the anticipated 3,000 or more dropouts by youngsters 16 or over, who are continuing summer jobs, had taken

In a test vote of 252 to 23 yesterday the House of Representatives clearly demonstrated that it will pass the Fulbright resolution today by a huge majority, placing itself on record for the first time in history during a major war as favoring a policy of international collaboration.

A preliminary motion to extend time of debate from the 40 minutes allowed under a suspension of the rules procedure to four hours afforded opportunity for the test. At least one significant announced change of stand indicated that the resolution itself will pass with only about 15 votes against it.

Debate yesterday left no doubt that Representatives had heard from home and were determined first that this country would have a policy of international cooperation, and second that the House, and Congress as a whole, is going to have a part in laying the foundation for that policy.

It was further evidenced in a number of speeches of proponents of the resolution that passage of the Fulbright resolution is only the initial step Congress will be asked to take to place the United States in a position of leadership in postwar international cooperation.

At an executive meeting of the House Foreign Affairs Committee before the session opened yesterday, the committee amended the

Badoglio Counsels Italians to Hit Nazis

Calls on Countrymen to Join With Allies and Drive Germans Out

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 20.—Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio called upon the people of Italy to take up arms against their former German allies in active cooperation with the United Nations in a proclamation published here today.

The Premier's appeal, in effect a declaration of hostilities, was the first official indication from any source the Italians might be accepted as full-fledged allies in the campaign to drive the Germans from Italy.

Badoglio declared "all talk about unconditional surrender (to the Allies) is out of date and irrelevant to the changed conditions of today," adding that "we have intervened decisively again Germany following on the aggressive attitude of the Germans."

Made Plea From Italy

It was announced the Premier made his call to arms from a new Italian government station, Radio Italiana, on the mainland, September 16, two days before the voice attributed to Benito Mussolini was broadcast over the German radio in an appeal to Italians to fight at Germany's side.

The text of the marshal's speech was carried by plane to North Africa and released here through Allied military channels.

The new stand apparently committed Badoglio and his followers, and the bulk of the Italian Fleet which already is in Allied ports, to active combat alongside Allied troops and ships.

His ringing declaration told his countrymen it was their "absolute duty to fight on the side of the British and Americans against the Germans and against the few senseless Italians—no longer of such name—who put themselves at their command."

"We are cooperating side by side with the Anglo-Americans who are now accepting our assistance in the task of driving the Germans from the country," he continued.

"Do Not Give Up"

Italians were advised to use "the terrible weapon of guerilla warfare" when outnumbered, and "to escape the country, cut communications, blow up bridges and dumps, attack isolated men and equipment and, above all, do not lose heart—persist."

The marshal said that when the armistice of September 3 was concluded "it was our intention to lay down our arms and abstain entirely from acts of hostility against anybody."

"Even after the Germans began to attack us we were patient and did not fight back, hoping these attacks were only isolated incidents and not the result of a premediated plan of aggression against us. Soon, however, we realized that whole German divisions were attacking our troops in Italy and outside Italy, were forcibly occupying our cities, harbors and airdromes, were pillaging our stores and the possessions of our citizens, while the German air force was bombing our ships."

"Out with the Germans!" Badoglio exclaimed. "After shedding so much blood in a war wanted by them and which was fought solely in their own interests we cannot tolerate to be looked upon and treated as a nation of slaves. . . How can they speak of honor—they who never had any? Not the Germans who abandoned our soldiers on the Don, in Libya, in Tunisia and in Calabria, nor the Fascists who filled their pockets with gold which should have been used in preparing for the war into which they incautiously threw the country."

Recalls Last War

Badoglio referred to partnership of the Americans, British and Italians in the last World War and declared the Allies "did not hesitate to state that their ultimate aim is the rebirth of a strong and united Italy," and asserted "they will not withdraw their help from us when the time comes to repair the havoc of war."

Just before the proclamation was published today, an American who had talked with the Italian chieftain gave the first authoritative account of Badoglio's escape from the near clutches of the Germans.

Badoglio, who formed an Italian government on July 25, the day of Mussolini's fall, realized that German troops surrounded Rome and intended to seize the capital, himself and King Vittorio Emanuele, the American said.

Before dawn on September 9, a few hours after announcing Italy's unconditional surrender to the Allies, he and his military advisers made up an automobile caravan and sped to a port on the Italian coast. A few hours later the Germans occupied Rome.

At the port, Badoglio and his party boarded an Italian ship and proceeded in broad daylight down the coast to Allied occupied territory without sighting any pursuing Germans.

(The Algiers radio said a new official Italian (Badoglio) government radio was operating on 421 meters. (Its location was not stated, but it was considered probable in London that it is at Palermo, the Sicilian capital.)

all sections of Congress.

An investigation by the House Military Affairs Committee was being considered. While no similar move developed immediately in the Senate, several high-ranking members of the upper branch were outspoken in disapproving any change in the chief of staff.

Regarded as especially significant was the firm stand taken by Senator Lister Hill (Democrat) of Alabama, majority whip and a close friend of President Roosevelt. Hill said:

"I think the place for General Marshall is right where he is. This war is different from all others. I think he should be General Issmo over all the fronts. Congress would be opposed to changing him."

Appears Almost Unanimous

Sen. Robert Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, who frequently opposes the Administration, made congressional support of Marshall appear to be almost unanimous, when he said:

"Any transfer of General Marshall would be the worst thing that could happen.

There was widespread speculation in the Washington press yesterday about the identity of the so-called "interests" wishing to get Marshall out of the way.

It is known that overall war strategy had occasionally forced Marshall to buck the wishes of British generals. But he is also said to have won the respect of Prime Minister Churchill, who once remarked:

"I'd like to have that man on my team."

Smooth Operation

Marshall is also represented as having worked smoothly with the British on the Anglo-American combined chiefs of staff.

There likewise appeared to be no more than the normal amount of internal dissension within the War Department. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, swears by his "boss." Admiral William D. Leahy, President Roosevelt's chief of staff, and Admiral Ernest J. King, coommander in chief of the United States fleet, see eye to eye with Marshall.

Argentine Move To End Relations With Axis Seen

Montevideo, Sept. 20 (AP)—The unexpected recall of Gen. Arturo Rawson to Buenos Aires from a tour of northern provinces was linked here today with reports that the regime of Gen. Pedro Ramirez might abandon Argentine neutrality.

Argentines here noted that Rawson was welcomed in Buenos Aires with shouts of "long live democracy" and long live Pan American unity." Rawson had spoken in favor of American unity and asserted the army would never do anything against the people's will.

It was thought the Ramirez government, looking for an excuse to break relations with the Axis, might take advantage of the German attitude toward the Vatican.

Windsors on Way To Visit Duchess' Aunt in Boston

Boston, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor are traveling light, accompanied by only a secretary and two servants, on their trip from Nassau to Boston to visit the Duchess' aunt, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, the British consul's office reported today.

Mrs. Merryman, with whom the duchess made her home in Baltimore, Md., before she married the duke, is under treatment at Faulkner Hospital for a broken hip.

The consul's office said the couple would arrive Wednesday. They arrived in Miami yesterday.

Slayer Sound Asleep At Execution Hour

Canon City, Colo., Sept. 20 (AP).—Vincent Donahue, acting State prison warden, had to wake up John Sullivan, 43, this morning to read him a death warrant and take him to the execution chamber at the scheduled time.

Donahue said Sullivan showed no emotion and spoke to no one. Sullivan, a handyman, was executed in the gas chamber for the fatal stabbing of Mrs. Carrie Culbertson of Manitou Springs in January, 1942.

Russians Take 1130 More Villages

Whole strings of cars loaded with ammunition and grain were captured intact by the Russians, another indication of the precipitate Nazi flight along many sectors of the huge front.

The German radio said the Smolensk battle was rising to a climax, and that Russian parachute troops were being dropped behind their lines above the northern arm of the Dnieper River bend.

The situation at Smolensk undoubtedly was precarious for the Germans. The Russians announced the capture of more than 4000 villages in a direct drive on that Bastion, once reported to be Adolf Hitler's eastern headquarters, and in the swing to the northwest.

Head-on smashes toward Smolensk and Roslavl to the south netted the Russian. up to 11 miles, an advance made through forests snarled with barbed wire, pocked with tank traps, and bristling with armored pillboxes.

Moscow dispatches said there was no German flight in this sector. They fought until cut down.

The Red army apparently was within 20 or 25 miles of Smolensk on the northeast.

Roslavl was menaced by Russians less than 22 miles away on the northeast and within 32 miles on the southeast.

Nazis Press Hungary

Stockholm, Sept. 20 (AP). — A Budapest dispatch said today the Germans were exerting terrific pressure on the Hungarians to send troops to the Balkans.

Greeks Kill 34 Germans

Cairo, Sept. 20 (AP). — Reports from Greece said today 34 Germans were killed and 40 wounded in sharp fighting recently between Greek guerillas and Nazi occupation forces in northern Peloponnesus.

72-Hour Bombing Turned Tide of Salerno Battle

London, Sept. 20 (AP).—Concentrated bombing turned the tide of the Battle of Salerno and eased a serious situation, enabling British and American troops to resume the offensive, the British Air Ministry news service said in a summary tonight.

For 72 hours the whole might of both the northwest African strategic and tactical air forces was hurled at Nazi troops and gun positions which commanded the Salerno beaches, it said. Under this pounding and the stiff defense aground the Germans yielded.

"Allied ground and air forces are now so coordinated in this theater they are used by the supreme commander as though they were his right and left fist," the news service stated.

RAF Bombers On Europe Raid

London (Tuesday), Sept. 21 (AP).—Formations of high-flying RAF bombers crossed the southeast English coast late last night and headed for the continent.

Observers reported that the roar of the bombers could be heard for more than an hour over one point, indicating that the attack on Nazi-dominated Europe was being made in some force.

French Commandos Reach Corsica; Yanks in Sight of Naples

in a 15-mile advance west of Salerno through weakening German resistance, dust, heat and mountains.

All Sardinia was in the hands of two Italian divisions which acted on orders of Marshal Pietro Badoglio and chased the Germans onto Corsica, 7 miles north.

(A United Nations radio broadcast from Algiers said the Allied penetration of the Salerno area now extended inland 19 miles. The British Eighth Army is joined "in full strength" with the Fifth, said the broadcast, which was recorded by the Associated Press.)

While the British Eighth Army consolidated its junction with Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army on the churned beaches of Salerno, the British Fifth Corps in the south captured Gioia, 28 miles inland and northwest of Taranto, extending the Allied hold on southern Italy.

246 Trucks Wrecked

Allied air power, particularly American Invader dive-bombers, ripped and tore with high explosives at German convoys totaling as high as 1800 vehicles retreating north of Contursi from the center of the Salerno front. The Allies destroyed 109 trucks and damaged 137 others.

A few minutes before news of the Corsican invasion was announced, the French radio at Algiers broadcast a warning to Germans that Corsican guerillas wearing skull-and-crossbones insignia on their sleeves must be considered regular soldiers and treated as prisoners of war in event of capture.

Naval vessels participated in the action, which included swift dashes into German-patrolled waters.

(NBC Reporter Don Hollenbeck, in a broadcast from Allied headquarters, said the Italian divisions which drove the Nazis off Sardinia were slated to cross to Corsica to help the French. He said the Germans were "trying to get to the port of Bastia for quick evacuation to Leghorn on the mainland.")

Control of Corsica would give the Allies one of the greatest air prizes in the Mediterranean theater, for from Corsica long-range fighter planes could sweep the Po Valley, held by Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, weeks and perhaps months before Allied ground forces could battle their way up the Italian boot to come close enough for direct action.

In Range of Southern France

It is also within easy bombing range of southern France—and long fighter range.

The operation is of tremendous importance to French morale. The French had felt they were left out of the Italian fighting while they wanted to do something on their own.

It was understood that in the first engagement, the French had ambushed a German column in the island's mountains and wiped out some 300 Nazis.

Seizure of the Sorrento Peninsula flanked the south side of the Bay of Naples. Sea approaches to Italy's second largest port in the shadow of Mount Vesuvius already were firmly commanded by the Allies, who seized the guardian islands of Capri, Ischia and Procada on either side of the bay last week.

American 155-mm. "long toms" of African and Sicilian fame now could lob shells into bomb-torn Naples at will from the peninsula or the islands. The peninsula lies 12 miles across the bay from Naples and its 866,000 people. Gen. Clark has said Naples is his first objective.

"The Fifth Army continues to extend its bridgehead against decreasing enemy resistance," the Allied communique said. "Reinforcements continue to arrive. The Eighth Army continues to advance."

Casualties of the Fifth Army in the violent beach battle below Salerno were smaller than at first feared, headquarters indicated. Losses were reported light compared with those inflicted.

(The Berlin radio said Allied forces in the Salerno area had been reinforced by three additional divisions, including two American, the Eighty-second Airborne Division and the Third Infantry Division. The first Canadian Division also has been placed under General Clark's command, it said.

(British forces attempting to thrust northward from Salerno to Naples were repulsed twice yesterday, the German broadcast said, and added that American attempts to outflank the new German positions "were frustrated.")

The Italian naval base of Castellammare at the northeast corner of the Sorrento Peninsula, and the important railway city of Torre Annunziata, 11 miles north of Castellammare, both came within easy artillery range of Allied batteries. Amalfi and other towns on the south side of the peninsula were taken.

(Among the towns on the peninsula supposedly captured were Sorrento, Piano, Positano, Equense and Massalubrense.

(The German communique reported the evacuation of Sardinia "according to orders and undisturbed by the enemy." The bulletin told of "abortive" British attacks in the Salerno area and said "farther to the east, the enemy is following up our movements only hesitatingly.")

The capture of the Sorrento peninsula was the largest announced gain in the Salerno campaign. There were no reports of any large engagements.

Indications were that the beaten Germans were moving back to take up new defensive positions. The German air force remained the weakest arm of the enemy war machine. Allied aircraft virtually were unopposed.

The Germans appeared to be in full retreat from the Salerno area.

Payrolls—in Half the Time
—saving many office hours

AS AMERICA finds new ways to do more in less time, the nation's stock-pile of that most precious material grows. There is more time—for greater and greater war output.

Everywhere this is happening—farmers finding ways to gather harvests in less time—men in mines and forests, in plants, on ships and rail lines, in offices, learning methods that take less time...

▲ FOR INSTANCE—this week many offices will produce today's complex payroll records in one-half the time formerly consumed. This despite the new "load" added by the Withholding Tax.

▲ THE REASON—a new payroll plan by Shaw-Walker automatically transfers each figure to the several essential records.

After writing payroll figures just once, every record needed is completed, correct and up-to-date—ready for quarterly reports and government inspection. Rewriting of figures is entirely eliminated.

Entirely eliminated, too, are separate records for War Bonds, Social Security, Withholding Tax, employee insurance, employee hospitalization, union dues and all other ledger records of a similar nature.

Every pay day the statement you give to each employee includes:

(1) A complete record of earnings.

(2) A detailed list of deductions.

(3) A notice telling the worker the exact amount he has on deposit with you toward his next War Bond.

▲ SO SIMPLE is the "KOPI-SPOT" payroll system that any clerk can handle it. It can be adapted to any type of payroll whether you pay by check or in cash—whether you make your entries by typewriter or by hand.

▲ A COMPLETE FOLDER has been prepared, illustrating the "KOPI-SPOT" and explaining its application to various payroll methods. May we send you a copy of it?

ALL MADE AT ONE WRITING: pay checks, employee pay statement, social security and withholding tax record, War Bond Record, ledger record of other deductions, check register and payroll summary.

FOR THE DURATION any old file will do—it's the system itself that counts!
AFTER THE WAR transfer the system intact to any of the following:

A SHAW-WALKER FIRE FILE—the steel file with built-in fire protection. It gives safe-like security, even in severe fires.

OR THE DRAWERS of the Shaw-Walker steel desk. This is the famous new low desk for comfort and hard work.

'Rosy' Production Report Held Up

Nelson's Data Showing 4% Rise Over July Kept 'in Clearance' Since Aug. 11

A report by War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson showing that August war production increased approximately 4 per cent over July levels has been held up "in clearance" since August 11 by the Office of War Information because high War Department officials questioned its phrasing as too optimistic," it was learned yesterday.

OWI officials were unable to forecast when it would be released, although they expressed confidence last night that they had succeeded in ironing out all differences.

It was understood that the War Department suggested the insertion of language indicating that production — although good — was still substantially behind schedule.

Deliberately Made Too High

WPB officials are reluctant to discuss schedules, contending that they were deliberately made too high to serve as "targets" for our expanding production effort.

However, it was understood that references to the lag behind schedule of actual performance would be edited into the report, but that a suggested revised version still had not received final clearance with the War Deprtment. Under no circumstances, however, would changes be made in the production figures in the report merely to make "more conservative" presentation, it was said.

Twenty-five Points Over July

The WPB production index was said to have jumped 25 points over July, compared to a July increase over June of 20 points.

The report for July made the following comment on the index figures:

"If our production goals are to be achieved, production stepups must continue during the next six months the good record of production increases of the past year and a half. Until recently (when production began to lag noticeably) munitions production in terms of points in the index was increasing on the average by more than 25 points each month."

Clearance with most of the other procurement agencies concerned with phases of the report was obtained while the report was held up at the War Department. It was understood, however, that all changes in the report would have to be cleared again with these agencies.

WPB originally prepared the report for release on September 15.

Mussolini's New 'Government' Attacks Vatican

New York, Sept. 20 (INS).—The Nazi-sponsored "National Republican Fascist Government" for Italy tonight launched a pointed attack on what was termed the "pacifism and anti-German sentiments" of the Vatican.

The puppet organization broadcast this sharp warning over the Berlin radio:

"Let the policy of the Vatican force us not to have recourse to radical measures."

The broadcast, which was beamed to Italy in Italian, was recorded by the FCC.

The broadcast stated:

"The Vatican, the prelates, all the hierarchy of the church, from the Pope down to the parish priests, have this choice: either with Fascist and Catholic Italy, or against it. It is not a problem of faith. It is a dilemma that is before the organization of the church.

"If it were true—and it is not—that there exists an incompatibility between the Catholic faith and the Fascist faith and if we were forced to choose between the Catholic faith and the Fascist faith—we, by the side of our comrades, would choose the Fascist faith!"

The puppet government, set up "in the name of Benito Mussolini," previously had excoriated Marshal Pietro Badoglio and King Victor Emmanuel, but had steered clear of attacking the Vatican.

Italians, Germans Fighting Violently In Two Sections

London, Sept. 20 (INS).—Violent fighting between armed Italians and German troops in northern and central Italy was disclosed today in advices reaching neutral countries. Street fighting in Turin was raging bitterly and the whole of central Italy was described as "a vast no man's land."

Before the Nazi forces of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel reached Turin the Italians were said to have distributed arms from the royal arsenal among the people and "citizens' guards" were quickly organized to supplement the Italian army forces.

Plot to Slay U. S. Fliers in China Bared

By the Associated Press

Chunking, Sept. 20.—A Japanese secret service plot to assassinate members of the 14th U. S. Air Force in China was disclosed with announcement that a 21-year-old Chinese was executed today by a firing squad.

The youth was hired July 15 at Pengpu, Anhwei Province, by the Japanese secret service chief there, the Chinese central news agency reported. He was said to have been promised a reward of 100,000 puppet Chinese dollars if he carried out an elaborate plan designed to create an incident between the United States and Chinese air forces.

The plot was said to have called for the killing of Americans and then the distribution of provocatory leaflets saying the killing was the work of Chinese airmen in protest against "unequal treatment."

The agent was supposed to return to Pengpu to receive the award.

The news agency said he received 10,000 Chinese dollars and 16,000 puppet Chinese dollars for expenses and left Pengpu July 17. He arrived in Chungking August 19 and was arrested a week later.

Veteran Convention Asks Postwar Program For Rehabilitation of All Disabled Soldiers

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—A six-point program providing for care of disabled war veterans of World War II was adopted unanimously today by the twenty-second national convention of Disabled American War Veterans.

The resolution called for "adequate hospitalization, compensation, vocational training and employment for the disabled," which would "constitute a preferred charge upon the Nation not only immediately following the war but as long as the need exists."

James L. Monnahan, 48, of St. Paul, Minn., was elected national commander to succeed William J. Dodd of Jersey City.

The program sought a compensation scale which would increase with "the increase in the cost of living." The resolution added that "no compensation is just that does not include dependency allowances."

It asked for provision of "suitable and gainful" employment following the vocational training since, it pointed out, without it rehabilitation would be incomplete.

"There must be no economy at the expense of providing the utmost in hospitalization, medical treatment, rehabilitation, compensation and employment" for the veterans, the resolution declared.

It also called for the expansion of veterans' hospital facilities and elimination of what it termed "red tape" in the administration of veteran benefits.

Tabled was a resolution calling for a national lottery, with war bonds as prizes, to help finance the war.

Other resolutions adopted: Urged continuation of the Veterans' Administration as an independent agency; recommended a national service officer of the disabled veterans for every regional office of the Veterans' Administration; urged continuation for six months to a year after the war of army and navy pay; asked insurance benefit payments for totally disabled World War II veterans holding national service life insurance policies.

Still other resolutions called upon President Roosevelt and Congress to adopt a bill increasing present veteran compensation and pension payments by 10 per cent for each 10 per cent living cost rise; indorsed the President's postwar veterans' program; opposed a uniform service act which would draft labor, and asked the Navy Department to "discontinue its practice of having men about to be discharged for disability sign waivers that their disabilities were suffered prior to enlistment and were not aggravated by service."

Rybakoff Denies He Aids Germany

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Nicholas Rybakoff, editor and publisher of the Russian language daily Russia, today characterized as untrue charges made by the Soviet trade-union magazine War and the Working Classes, in Moscow, that the paper was the "legal conductor of false German information in the United States."

Rybakoff said the article was "100 per cent lies. I will probably take legal action."

Buffer State Plan Declared Absurd By Adolf Berle

The State Department considers the idea of a cordon sanitaire against Soviet Russia as "absurd," Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr., has informed the former Rumanian minister here, Charles A. Davila.

The statement was made in reply to a letter from Davila incorporating the latter's protest against a columnist's assertion that the State Department turned an "icy cold shoulder," to exiled Balkan leaders advocating friendly relations between their countries and Russia.

In this protest, Davila emphasized that broadcasts which he had been making to Rumania over the OWI network attacking the idea of any postwar system of buffer states in eastern Europe had met the approval of the State Department.

Poll Tax Bill To Be Discussed

Chairman Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana yesterday called a special meeting of the Senate Judiciary Committee for Friday to consider the anti-poll tax bill which tied up the Senate in a filibuster at the close of the 77th Congress.

The bill, which would wipe out a poll tax as a prerequisite for voting in seven Southern States in elections for President and Congress, was passed by the House last May 25. It failed to pass the Senate.

"That's OUR railroad, Tommy!"

A tiny lad on tip-toe flattens his nose against the window-pane, watching a passenger train speed by.

"That's our railroad, Tommy!" grandmother explains.

Yes, to grandmothers and kids...to farmers and business men...to all the people who live in the Southern Railway's territory . . . the Southern is "our railroad."

And how right they are...for the Southern is their railroad. Their railroad . . . and yours!

It brings you the clothes you wear and the food you eat. It hauls the fuel and lumber and brick that warm and shelter you.

It serves your mines and mills and industries . . . your forests and farms...your villages and your bustling, growing cities and towns.

It shares your pride in the Southland's progress; your dreams of a better, a greater South. And it works with you, in countless ways, to help make those dreams come true.

Today, your railroad has gone to war. Day and night, the men and women of the Southern are moving fighting freight and fighting men . . . keeping the wheels rolling under the heaviest transportation load in history.

Tomorrow, when final Victory has been won, the busy trains of your railroad will serve the growing transportation needs of the South . . . just as efficiently, dependably, economically as they are now serving the transportation needs of a nation at war.

Then, more than ever, you'll be proud to say of the Southern—"That's our railroad!"

Congress' Garage Proposed As Servicemen's 'Hotel'

The sight of nearly a thousand servicemen lounging in the seats and on the floors of Union Station at 4 a. m. Sunday moved Representative Tolan (Democrat) of California to introduce a joint resolution calling for conversion of the underground garage on the Capitol Plaza, used by congressional members' into an improvised hotel for men in the armed forces.

"I have been informed that at least 1000 cots or double-decker bunks could be placed in the garage," he declared, "and I am sure that the automobiles would be able to stand winter weather much better than those boys."

The garage, located under the plaza, is just one block from Union Station and has about 25,000 cubic feet of floor space. The resolution provides that all expenses of the conversion be borne by the contingent funds of the House and Senate, and that the architect of the Capitol supervise operation of the sleeping quarters.

New Plan Outlined

Key workers in Washington's civilian war activities met yesterday in the District Building to outline a new plan under a reorganization policy designed to stimulate volunteer participation in the city's essential wartime enterprise.

John Hasley, as chairman of the group designated by the Commissioners September 7 as the Civilian War Services Board, explained that every effort will be made under the new setup to encourage volunteers to join the ranks of citizens warworkers who are carrying out the many projects necessary to the welfare of the District during the emergency.

The four most successful bond and stamp sellers among school children in divisions 10-13 will receive prizes ranging from a $50 war bond to $10 in stamps, A. E. Lichtman, president of Lichtman Theaters, has announced. Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent, has approved the plan. All sales will be handled directly through the schools, it was said, and all the children have to do is to contact their teachers.

"It was necessary to put him under protective custody"

To the Nazis, he is dead. Their rifles cracked. He fell. But to all the free world, he lives. Yes, lives on as a symbol and an omen. For by shooting this helpless hostage they have, instead of stifling resistance, made each of his bleeding wounds a tongue eloquent for vengeance.

Multiply this by the millions of civilians shot, starved or blown to pieces by the Axis—with malice aforethought—and you have some picture of the staggering crime of which these fiends are guilty. The world is too small for both them and us. In justice to ourselves, to all decent people, and to their children who come after them, we must put down and punish these powers of darkness—and eradicate the guilty ones utterly from the earth. The best way to accomplish this purpose is to . . .

Nazi Generals, Red Prisoners, Said to Aid in Hitler Revolt

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Sept. 20.—The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said today more than 100 German generals and other officers who lost the battle of Stalingrad have formed a "Union of German Officers" and called upon their countrymen to overthrow Hitler and establish a "government having the confidence of the people" and strong enough to bring about peace.

The announcement, reprinted from Free Germany, organ of the "National Committee of Free Germany," said the officers, who came to Moscow September 11 from five Russian prisoner-of-war camps set up the union, would form part of the national committee.

Von Seidlitz Chairman

Artillery Gen. Walter von Seidlitz, who commanded the 51st German Army Corps at Stalingrad was elected chairman of the officer group and vice chairman of the national committee.

Calling themselves the "generals and officers of the Sixth German Stalingrad army," which was annihilated by the Soviet counter-offensive last winter, they appealed to the German people and army for an end to "the senseless, futile war" which "might any day cause a national catastrophe."

They said Finland, Hungary and Rumania might drop out of the struggle shortly, causing Germany to lose a war for which only Hitler and his regime are to blame.

Germany today, the appeal stated, faced a worse isolation than in 1918. "It is now necessary to save all Germany."

Among the more than 100 signers of the appeal were Lieut. Gen. Alexander Edler von Daniels, Gens. Otto Korfes and Martin Latman and Walter Meyer, leader of an SS Deaths' Head division.

"We suffered the pangs of hell," they said. "In Germany, we were given up for dead, but we have been born again for a new life. We cannot keep silent any longer."

Partners with Industry!
The railroads of America are backing industry to the limit in the war of production. Only the close coordination born of a common cause could result in the extraordinary achievements of transportation and industry since the war began.
For many years the Seaboard Railway has recognized the interdependence of industry and transportation. On the established principle that the welfare of the railroad depends upon the prosperity of its patrons, the Seaboard has been working over a long period of time for the economic development of the territory it serves.
The Seaboard's interest extends beyond the location of new plants. It is equally concerned with the success of all industry served by its Line. Its policy is to provide adequate service and to adjust the freight rates on raw materials and finished products to enable these industries to compete with similar industries whether located in the South or elsewhere.
Remarkable progress has been made in the industrial development of the South in recent years. Present indications point to further expansion in the post-war period.
Seaboard will work in the future—as in the past—as Partners With Industry.

tons on Ambon.

In the Solomons area, where air activity has been intense, action was on a smaller scale.

Twelve Japanese planes attacked the American airfield on Munda, New Georgia, and American positions on Vella Lavella.

West of Amboina, Liberators started fires visible for 30 miles among airdrome workshops at Namlea on Boeroe Island, which is in the Netherlands East Indies. Fires of similar intensity were set in an Allied raid by medium bombers on the airfield of Selaru on the Tanimbar Islands southeast of Amboina.

Today's reports emphasized air punches delivered in the Southwest Pacific sector in contrast with others recently telling of heavy American raids in the South Pacific (Solomons).

In that area alone, since September 11, United States bombers and fighters have destroyed 100 Japanese planes, and reduced in a large measure the value of the Kahili and Ballale airdromes.

In a desperate effort to prevent the fall of their remaining Solomons bases, the Japanese have brought heavy air reinforcements and replacements for more than 600 planes destroyed by American pilots since the start of the offensive last June 30.

The Monday communique of Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported three surprise night raids against Kahili and Ballale, followed by a daylight attack on Ballale. In the latest assault on Ballale 14 of 60 Japanese interceptor planes were shot down.

Starling Plans To Retire Nov. 1

ment here who could make good if given proper backing.

It was the second time that Colonel Starling had been offered the job of police chief here. The first time was in the early 20's when the late Commissioner James F. Oyster asked him to head the department. To Starling over the years came many other offers. Houston, Tex., wanted him to become commissioner of safety at a salary three times what he was getting as a Secret Service man. He turned thm eall down.

"No, pahdner," he would say, in his Kentucky drawl, "I think I'd better keep oh doing what I've been trained to do—protecting the boss man."

Doesn't Know His Mileage

Colonel Starling must be one of the most-traveled men in the world. He doesn't know what his mileage is; maybe a million miles, maybe more. It can't be judged by the miles traveled by the five Presidents because Starling often doubled that. It was his job for many years to go out in advance of the President, make all arrangements with railroads, local police authorities and the like, and then return to Washington and start out anew with the White House party.

It was he who made the advance arrangements for President Roosevelt's good-will tour of South America in 1936. He flew down several weeks ahead, and met the President at Rio de Janeiro.

Started, in 1914

Colonel Starling, a Kentucky deputy sheriff and a railroad special agent in his younger days, came to the White House as a Secret Service man in 1914. He became supervising agent of the White House detail in 1935, when the late "Dick" Jarvis was transferred to California. He turned over this title about a year and a half ago to Michael F. Reilly, a former football star at George Washington University.

Colonel Starling says the smartest thing he ever did happened 9 years ago, when he married Ida Lee Bourne, a receptionist at the National Broadcasting Co. They live at the Mayflower, but are planning to go to Miami after Starling starts out to use up his accumulated leave on November 1. He has bought a house overlooking Biscayne Bay, and expects to do a lot of fishing in the future—unless the Secret Service can use him again, say, at the next peace conference.

If he has kept a diary of his 29 years at the White House, it ought to make good reading.

Extortion Plot Theory Probed In Bacon Death

Hollywood, Sept. 20 (INS)—Detectives tonight investigated the possibility that David Gaspar G. Bacon, movie serial star, was murdered in an attempt at extortion.

Blakely C. Patterson, an orchestra singer and actor, told police that a few hours before Bacon was found stabbed in the back, the actor told him of having received a letter from a mutual acquaintance, demanding money.

Patterson said Bacon asked him to go along to meet the man who wrote the letter, but said he was unable to go because of a previous engagement.

Automatic Pilot Takes Over As Planes Commence BombRun

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—A super-sensitive electronic mechanism that keeps bombing planes on their courses despite cross currents, wind variations and air blasts from exploding antiaircraft shells, was explained publicly for the first time today.

The device is an automatic electronically-controlled pilot, said to have been "one of America's best kept military secrets." Details were announced only because loss of some planes so equipped made it probable the enemy now knows of it.

Effect of More Planes

The improvement was credited with being one of the factors in the bomb devastation of Europe and Asia. Its use is "equivalent to a material increase in the number of planes participating in an attack."

The autopilot was designed to "take over completely the duties of the pilot on bombing runs" and to "hold the plane on a designated course without wavering."

"Precision bombing requires a steady platform, because if the plane is tipped or otherwise off its course at the time the bomb is released, this tipping or movement will be imparted to the bomb and cause it to miss.

Held on Bull's-eye

The autopilot provides an artificial tripod to hold the plane on the bull's-eye when bombs are released, just as a rifleman would use a rest to steady his gun.

The case of a Fortress cut almost in two was cited. The pilot's manual control cables connecting to elevators and rudder were severed, but the ship was flown home safely "because the control surface motors of the electronic system were located far in the tail," and were undamaged.

Contracts Barred In Critical Areas

transportation, small business, cost factors and conservation of special industrial abilities.

It was explained that it is not planned to build any more new industrial facilities, except in emergencies, although it is intended to move existing facilities out of labor shortage areas if necessary to carry out the new program. Present procurement regulations require contracting officers to prepare a written explanation whenever letting a contract in a labor shortage area.

Bowen pointed out that the directive recognizes the "increasing seriousness" of manpower, "comparative completion" of the facilities construction program, "increasing strain on transportation" and the need to expand some war programs while others are being curtailed.

59 Areas "Critical"

In a parallel action, Nelson sent a letter to all prime war contractors inclosing a list of the 59 areas designated as "critical" labor supply areas by the War Manpower Commission and asked them to use the list as a guide "in placing more subcontracts in the less critical labor areas."

The new directive ordered the giving of "due weight" to the following factors after questions of delivery time and labor supply were considered, thus setting up a third grouping "for the purpose of securing the most effective utilization of the national resources:"

(1) Cost and efficiency, (2) the share that can be given to small business, (3) conservation of special abilities, (4) avoidance of need for creating new facilities, and (5) savings in use of transportation.

Draft Quotas Must Stand, Congress Told

water, transportation and health activities against a "breakdown" from the draft.

Throughout the morning and early afternoon, General Marshall, before a battery of clicking cameras, drive home the Army's argument for a 7,700,000 Army by January 1.

For the first time, he testified, the Army has troops fully trained in this country before sailing: "We are now ready to send troops overseas to bring the greatest force to bear on the enemy in the shortest possible time."

"When you have a man on the run," he told the committee, "the important thing is to keep him running. You must cut him down while he is off balance."

To fail to meet the Army's monthly draft calls would force the high command to "emasculate" some divisions in order to fully man others ready to move; would leave the Army short of troops to send overseas in the fall of 1944; would thwart the present goal of five million men overseas by January 1, 1945.

"It would be speculating on the war ending soon," he said. "To speculate on that is dangerous. You can very quickly demobilize. But you can't improvise."

Marshall told the committee of plans to create from 430 to 440 additional battalions of special troops—engineers, mechanics, signalmen, quartermasters, men needed for operation of occupied ports. Some highly trained divisions in this country have been seriously depleted to fill these battalions, he indicated, and must be built again to battle strength by the Army's share of the 1,221,000 men needed by all armed branches before January 1.

Generals Ask for Men

"They are all on demand," he said. "We are being pressed daily for these men by Generals Eisenhower and MacArthur."

"All we could do (if Army quotas are unfilled) is reduce our program and change our strategy," he said.

"We have been able to develop in this country the great ground force necessary to the winning of this war. Do you wish to cut that? Do you wish to cut these special troops? From a military standpoint, as well as good business, that would be most unfortunate."

Division "Ripped to Pieces"

He said the first division to land in Salerno "would have been a much better division if it had not been ripped to pieces" by previous withdrawals to form other units, requiring replacements denied advantage of the division's own early training.

Marshall said there are 700,000 fathers already in the Army, and if he had emotions on the subject "they relate to those soldiers, those fathers, in battle."

Like Marshall, Admiral King testified that failure to reach the Navy manpower goals on schedule would "adversely affect the conduct of the war," unduly prolong it, and exact a higher cost in men and money. Use of new ships and aircraft now coming into service would have to be deferred unless the Navy could get and train the men needed to man them, he said.

The Navy's share alone of the 200,000 fathers to be inducted into the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, "will about suffice to man nine of the large 27,000-ton aircraft carriers," the chief of naval operations testified.

Plane-Sown Mines Blast Nazi Ships

London, Sept. 20 (AP).—A mounting "invisible" Allied air campaign against enemy shipping has been making increasing inroads into Germany's war production, it was disclosed tonight. This campaign is waged with mines sown from the air.

Nazi vessels are being torpedoed, bombed, strafed, and sunk by mines sown from the air. The forays have been intensified until some dozen craft were sunk and no fewer than 60 set afire or damaged during the last week, a toll which the Nazis, if they followed the line of their propaganda reports in the past, would magnify to a big naval coup.

The attacks are unfolding largely along coastal routs, in the Baltic Sea, and among the Scandinavian straits—routes as important to the Nazis now as transocean shipping is to the Allies.

2d Front Demonstration

area probably the Nation's "tightest." Milk production throughout the country this year is falling below expectations, but is considerably above prewar averages. Desperate attempts will be made by WFA to boost the 1944 output.

Subsidy Plan Foremost

Foremost among these attempts is the present attempt by the food agency to interest Congress in providing funds that would increase prices to dairy farmers without raising milk costs to consumers. This subsidy plan, which the Senate Banking and Currency Committee last week opposed, will be explained to the House Agriculture Committee this morning by War Food Administrator Marvin Jones.

Meantime, Jones and Maj. Gen. E. B. Gregory, Army Quartermaster General, yesterday renewed their plea to farmres to market their turkeys as soon as possible so soldiers overseas can be assured turkey dinner for Thanksgiving.

Total Needed Not in Sight.

The Army, now purchasing 10,000,000 pounds of turkey, has been unable to obtain the supply as rapidly as desired. Shipments have been going overseas since early September, but the total amount needed is not yet in sight. Quartermaster officers in charge of the purchases said yesterday they would get the total amount "if we have to take bird dogs out and run them down," but said they would like to get the order cleared before turkeys go on sale again to civilians in October.

Prospects for an adequate supply of beef during the winter months remained good, with sales at the 12 largest meat markets yesterday reported well above those of a year ago. Many livestock markets were jammed with the largest supplies in 15 years. The total number of cattle unloaded at the 12 points was 144,000 head. The previous high for a single day was September, 1928, when 155,000 head arrived at the dozen markets.

Test Vote Assures Huge House Majority for Postwar Collaboration Resolution

resolution to quell the fears of some House Republicans that the executive branch would interpret its passage as giving carte blanche for executive agreements on foreign policy. The amendment, consisting of four words, "through its constitutional processes," made it specific that Congress will expect to ratify any postwar international arrangements.

The resolution, which will be voted upon after the House has used up the remaining hour and a half of debate today, reads:

"That the Congress hereby expresses itself as favoring the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and maintain a just and lasting peace among the nations of the world, and as favoring participation by the United States therein through its constitutional processes."

Delayed by Quorum Calls

Yesterday's debate was delayed by quorum calls of three determined opponents—Representatives Hoffman (Republican) of Michigan, Shafer (Republican) of Michigan and Andreson (Republican) of Minnesota, following a bitter-end and obviously losing obstructionist game.

Bipartisan efforts to obey the dictates of the folks back home to find some way of avoiding future wars placed such veterans as Representative Eaton (Republican) of New Jersey, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, and Representative Luther Johnson (Democrat) of Texas in the same camp.

Two Nephews Killed

Gravely, Eaton told a silent House that two of his seven nephews had been killed in action in this war, and "by God, I am willing to vote for anything which will outlaw future wholesale murder in the name of civilization."

Johnson sharply warned the House, some of whose members had been describing the resolution as an "innocuous gesture" which "doesn't commit us to anything," that the resolution is "no Fourth of July Declaration, but a pledge on the part of Congress to which 90 per cent of the people would subscribe if it were put to a vote."

Dramatic Incident

Late in the afternoon occurred the most dramatic incident during the course of a debate which may some day find its place in the pages of history books.

Representative Sumners (Democrat) of Texas, veteran chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who had declared the passage of the resolution just "did not make sense to me," came into the well to say he had changed his mind on his vote because of the preceding speech by Representative Mundt (Republican) of South Dakota.

Mundt had said, "I fear this resolution may do more harm than good if it passes, and I am convinced that its defeat would be more harmful than its passage." Mundt asked for passage of the resolution, since it had been brought up, because of the effect on the members of the United Nations should it be rejected.

Necessity of Leadership

Representative Wadsworth (Republican) of New York keyed his speech upon consideration of the necessity of leadership of the United States after this war.

Most vociferous opponent of the resolution, with the exception of Hoffman, was Representative Sumner (Republican of Illinois, who declared it "the most dangerous bill ever presented to the American Congress."

She gave a packed gallery the only laugh of the afternoon because just as she was proclaiming that she had learned not to expect anything of Congress because of the seniority rule, her time was up and Speaker Rayburn brought down the gavel with a resounding bang.

Women at Work for a Railroad at War

America needs millions of women to take over war jobs... to stay with those jobs... to help speed the day when our fighting men will return victorious!

Santa Fe women are answering this call all along the line.

Right now thousands of Santa Fe women are doing war-vital work to "keep 'em rolling." Many are pitching into "unglamorous" jobs... greasing engines, operating turntables, wielding shovels, working in blacksmith shops, and cleaning roller bearings. They take pride in their work, too!

Many of these women have husbands, sweethearts, brothers or sons in the armed forces. Many came to work to replace a Santa Fe relative who had been called into service. Others took jobs because they knew womanpower must step in when manpower goes to war.

☆ We of the Santa Fe salute these women who know that what they are doing is vital to Victory!

ized for emergency purchases of medicines and supplies . . . ; that he has provided, on different occasions, free hospitalization at Gallinger for his personal employes . . . and free board for certain favored employes of the hospital; that for six years he employed as his personal servant a Filipino whose wages were paid from appropriations made for Gallinger Hospital.

"Naturally I can make no assertion as to the truth of these charges, but in my opinion any one of them would, if proven, be ample cause for dismissal of any employe from the public service."

Dr. Bocock, informed of the McCarran statement by a Post reporter, said: "The charges made are absolutely without foundation of fact. While certain of the allegations cited have occurred, they were either with proper authorization or were matters over which I had no control, and therefore cannot be held reprehensible."

Report Made July 12

From District sources it was learned that the report to the Commissioners was made July 12 by Frank L. Yates, Assistant Comptroller General in the General Accounting Office, and turned over to the United States attorney for the District, who is understood to be carrying on his own investigation.

It was learned also that some of the charges against Dr. Bocock, made under oath by former hospital employes, were that "in the spring of 1942 two or three dozen dressed chickens, about 24 packages of dry cereal, 100 pounds of sugar and meat weighing 10 pounds or more were placed in Dr. Bocock's car . . . but no such charges were made to his account."

Another statement sworn to by an unidentified former employe declared that "seven years ago, two horses owned on the hospital grounds were taken to Dr. Bocock's farm . . . and never returned." The same fate befell two wagons and a horse-drawn sprinkler, the witness said.

Yates' report also asserted that "it is apparent that records maintained for narcotics are inadequate, incorrect and loosely handled."

Still other witnesses signed sworn statements indicating that "W. G. Eicke, former storekeeper, had his family's clothes laundered free of charge in the hospital laundry and he and West (Chief Pharmacist Charles C. West) took liquor from the hospital storeroom."

Yates told the Commissioners in his statement that Robert A. Roane, administrative assistant, "had board and room free at Gallinger from 1930 until September, 1933 . . . and stated under oath that he had accepted $35 from West for his assistance and influence in securing the appointment of Harry L. Limparis as an employe of the hospital."

"Roane stated that until he left the hospital June 2, 1940, he frequently carried on the payrolls employes whose annual or sick leave had been used, substituting in those positions new employes whose names were not on the payroll," Yates continued. "The checks issued in the names of those fraudulently carried on the rolls were indorsed by payees and turned over to those not carried on the rolls."

All True, Says Roane

Roane told a Post reporter that "the charges made by Yates are perfectly true, and I would be glad to help the Senate committtee in any way that I can to see that there is a general cleaning-out at Gallinger."

McCarran, in releasing some of the contents of the GAO report, said: "Personally, I shall not be satisfied until every factor connected with the administration and operation of Gallinger Hospital has been thoroughly investigated, the facts brought to light, and until adequate corrective measures, whether legislative or both, have been taken. I am confident that Senator Holman's subcommittee is proceeding and will proceed with this end in view."

He also declared: "In addition to the charges leveled against Dr. Bocock and certain other employes of Gallinger, the report furnished by the Comptroller General's office called attention to several instances of sloppy administrative practice which undoubtedly require correction. The report also called attention to an alleged failure to maintain adequate records of alcoholic liquors and narcotics, and appears to indicate that no adequate control over such supplies has been maintained.

"In this regard, the committee will be greatly interested to learn what corrective measures the District Commissioners have applied or proposed to apply.

"Full details of the matters referred to have been furnished to the committee by the office of the Comptroller General, at my request, and these will be turned over to Senator Holman. It should be noted that while the resolution was introduced primarily as a result of complaints by patients in the tubercular ward concerning conditions having to do with the welfare of such patients, the resolution was purposely made broad enough for a thorough investigation pertaining to the administration of Gallinger Hospital, on the theory that the conditions specifically complained of by patients were not likely to exist except concurrently with numerous irregularities in the administration of the institution. Facts uncovered so far seem to commend the correctness of this view."

place.

At the work permit office, furthermore, 30 youngsters under 16 requested work permits during the past week and will not continue school this year, it was reported. These youths have finished the eighth grade and have parental consent to enter jobs. In normal times, 30 permits would not have been applied for in a year's time by 14 and 15 year old children, it was said.

No exact figures were available on dropouts by older boys and girls, since permits issued to do summer work need not be renewed by those 16 years and older who decided to keep working. About 25,000 underage school students applied for summer work permits.

No special shortage in teachers was noticeable, although Dr. Reed said elementary schools were operating with a large quota of temporary instructors who have not taken and passed the regular exams admitting them to appointment in the system.

Vocational schools showed a slight drop—712 this fall against 717 this year. The Teachers College enrolled 505 this year, 495 last.

The U. S. sub backed away from the Jap gunboat it had just rammed. The Jap, done for, hit back hard. Machine gun pellets cut a white line in the blue water, creeping closer, like a hissing snake, until it struck the pigboat's dark hull with spiteful clangor. The sub's distance from the stricken Jap was widening. The commander had ordered the sub's deck cleared, but he fell, wounded, as the last of his men scurried below. They started to come back for him, but he saw that in a matter of seconds the Jap's three-inchers could be brought to bear. He spoke three words in sharp command: "Take her down!" The hatch cover clanged. They took her down. To the sub's safety. To his death.

"three little words that will ring in America's ears forevermore"

★ Some day, when this war is over, midshipmen wandering through Memorial Hall at Annapolis, where the sacred relics of the Navy are kept, may find engraved on a tablet a third noble phrase to take its place along with those other two that have come ringing down through the corridors of history to inspire fighting men of the sea—John Paul Jones'—"We have just begun to fight," and James Lawrence's—"Don't give up the ship!" It will be Commander Howard W. Gilmore's—"Take her down." So says Paul Gallico in the October Esquire, in a splendid tribute to Commander Gilmore accompanying the John Falter painting reproduced above. Already, as if in confirmation of this conjecture, a building at one of America's permanent submarine bases has recently been named Gilmore Hall. Thus are some of this war's heroes surely earning the highest honor that history can bestow—immortality. Meanwhile, as long as there are issues between ourselves and the Axis that can only be resolved by "the drumming guns that have no doubts," their example serves as a powerful and immediate stimulus to the efforts of all Americans everywhere. That's why, along with the galaxy of pin-ups and other divertissements demanded by the armed forces, Esquire devotes its largest single unit of space, each month, to a salute to the war's outstanding individual heroes ★ That, in turn, may be acknowledged as another reason why Esquire is a favored magazine of America's fighting men, 34.2% of whom it is reported to reach regularly.

OPA Studying Higher Butter Point Value

The Office of Price Administration is considering raising the point value of butter to guarantee more uniform distribution, it was learned here last night on reliable authority.

Shortages in Washington and in other seaboard cities, both East Coast and West Coast, have been caused mainly by overbuying in war-rich creamery areas, making it unnecessary for marketers to ship their goods to further points for purchase, Paul E. Quintus, administrator of the butter order, Agriculture Department, said yesterday.

Profits an Issue

Washington dairy distributors said creameries which make butter consumed locally will contract with them only on a "when and if" basis, and that Government orders, seasonal slump, and the fact farmers make more money selling cream as cream or fluid milk were making local deliveries shorter and shorter.

Creameries supplying Washington butter are located in Ohio, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas. Creameries in Virginia supply an "undergrade" butter not distributed here, according to Quintus.

Surcease from Government claims will come at the end of this month, Qunitus said, when the stockpile is complete. Although Government agencies are calling for 20 per cent of the supply this month for use in lend-lease and by the war services, Quintus said the accumulation acquired by September 30 is expected to last until March.

Milk Unlimited

He affirmed, however, the claim of local dairies, that butter was less available now because farmers sell to creameries only when they cannot make greater profits in the cream and fluid milk market. Our big butter year was in 1933, our big depression year, Quintus said. Price ceiling adjustments might encourage production, he said.

Americans now buy unlimited quantities of milk and cream and just as they would buy unlimited amounts of ice cream if there were no restrictions, he added.

Consumption of dairy goods has averaged 10 and 11 per cent above last year's, Quintus said, and during the week ended September 9, the last for which a report is available, consumption leaped to 13 per cent above consumption a year ago.

Home-Sharing Plan Aids Thousands, FHA Says

Thousands of war workers are obtaining living quarters through the National Housing Administration's "share your home" campaign, the NHA said yesterday.

Approximately 46,000 units will be made available through conversion of existing houses and buildings under leases or priorities processed as of August 31, NHA said. It added additional quarters would be obtained at an average rate of 6000 a month.

Mrs. Bennett, Befriender of Jobless, Dies

Mrs. Jean Bennett, 55, who with her late husband, John S. Bennett, spent most of her life ministering to Washington's homeless and unemployed at Central Union Mission, died last night at Doctors Hospital after a long illness.

MRS. BENNETT

After being graduated from Bryn Mawr, Mrs. Bennett came to Washington with her husband and lived for 28 years at the mission, helping deserving and worthless alike. When her husband died in 1937 she took over his work as superintendent and also took over announcing of the mission's weekly testimonial radio programs.

In addition to the mission, she superintended the Mission Farm and the Children's Emergency Camp, which she founded to provide full care for about 75 children and camp vacations for a much larger number.

Mrs. Bennett also was an active club woman here. She was president of the American Soroptimist club as well as of the local Soroptimists and Woman's City Club. She was vice president of the International Union of Gospel Missions and the Business and Professional Women's Club. In 1935, she became chairman of the women's division of Federal Housing Administration and turned the first spade of dirt on their first project.

Mrs. Bennett is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Ackley, of Ocean City, N. J.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2:30 p. m. at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw.

WLB Wrongly Taking Case, Suit Charges

A Detroit office building operator charged in a suit in District Court yesterday that the War Labor Board has wrongfully taken jurisdiction in a labor argument only because the CIO is attempting to organize the charwomen in the building where the WLB has offices.

Simon Murphy, complainant in the suit, seeks an injunction against the WLB which would prevent holding of a hearing on the case here on September 28. The suit says that originally the Detroit office of the WLB was to hear the case, but when Murphy instituted court proceedings in the United States District Court for Michigan, the union argument was certified to Washington.

The suit states that WLB has jurisdiction only in interstate or war affecting labor cases. In this case, however, according to the suit, the CIO started to organize service employes in the Penobscot Building in Detroit, which Murphy operates and in which the WLB has offices. CIO picketed the building and on the basis that the WLB was being interfered with through the picketing, the WLB intervened in the dispute, according to the suit.

By Ray C. B. Brown

Pan American Union presents a concert by the Orquesta Tipica de la Policia of the City of Mexico on Monday night in the Hall of the Americas. Conductor: Pablo Marin Hernandez; assistant conductor: Miguel Lerdo de Tejada, jr.

At the invitation of the Mexican Ambassador, guests of the Pan-American Union filled the Hall of the Americas last evening to hear a concert by the Orquesta Tipica de la Policia, which left the City of Mexico not long ago for a tour of the United States. Were we to send in return a typical police band, the effect would not be as picturesque either in uniforms or in instrumtation, for an "orquesta tipica" has a brilliant tone color particularly its own. To analyze the constituents of that color is not easy, but the brilliance is probably based on the two salient instruments, the salterio and the marimba.

BROWN

With one exception, the first part of the program consisted of compositions by the conductor, Pablo Marin Hernandez, whose scoring is as vivacious as his manner on the podium. A "Rapsodia de le Revolucion Mexicana" was followed by "Jilgueros y Clarines," a "Fantasia Americana" in which "Dixie," "Suwanee River" and other North American songs were woven, and another rhapsody based on airs native to Yucatan. The exception was an interesting "Bravura" by Galindo.

Vocal solos by Ramon Salas, Gil Mondragon and other singers were heard in the latter half of the program which was devoted to huapangos, corridos, canciones rancheros and various popular types of songs.

Theodore Schaefer presents Eileen Engberg in an organ recital on Monday night in Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. Program of compositions by Bach, Clerambault, Mulet Vierne, McAmis and Karg.

Eileen Engberg, a young American organist with a capable technique, was heard in a recital last evening in Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, and left a most pleasing impression. Her well-arranged program showed good taste, her registrations were artistically contrived, and her playing was musicianly in phrasing. In her readings one felt the insight of a sensitive nature and the power to communicate emotional impulses

Her performance of Bach's difficult Toccata and Fugus in D minor as the opening number was occasionally tentative and a little lacking in vigor, as though she were cautious in the handling of that masterpiece.

The program included two of Bach's chorale-preludes, "I Call to Thee, Lord Jesus" and "If Thou but Suffer God to Guide Thee," Cleramault's study, "Masse et Dessus de la Trompette;" Hulet's "Tu es Petrus," the andante from Vierne's first symphony, and "Dreams" by Hugh McAmis.

Bacon and Corn Make a Grand Casserole

In these days of shortages there are so many things to recommend this casserole dinner we hardly know where to start. It's timely for the corn season. It's quick and easy to fix. It spreads the flavor of only a half pound of bacon through a hearty meal for 4.

Since the bacon does double duty as a seasoning for the corn, replacing butter in this casserole—it's wise to get Armour's Star Bacon. It's a rich, mild bacon that is sugar-cured in its own juices, then slow-smoked over fragrant hickory and hardwood fires. It gives this casserole such a grand flavor your family will call for it often.

Place 2 cups of fresh or canned whole kernel corn in a casserole. Arrange slices of Star Bacon in a fan shape over the top of corn as illustrated. Bake in a 350° F. oven until the bacon is crisp and the corn is heated through and well seasoned with the bacon fat. Garnish with a mixture of chopped green pepper and pimiento. It makes 4 generous servings.

The Atlantic Community

We come now to the practical question of what alliances the United States must seek to form and on what terms. If that question can be answered correctly we shall then be able to see how the level of our post-war armaments, the degree of our military preparedness, and the choice of strategic outposts and bases should be determined. For obviously we cannot remain permanently at the level of armaments which we have set for 1943. It is no less obvious that the nation will not, in any future we need consider, disarm. Somewhere between the two extremes the level of our post-war establishments must be fixed.

Yet it will be impossible to fix it except in relation to the military power of other states, and on a basis of assured knowledge whether we must regard each of them as partner, potential foe, or uncertain neutral. We must also have this knowledge in order to determine what strategic dispositions we should make. For unless we have organized our own position in the post-war order of the great powers we cannot have a military policy. It is impossible to prepare against every contingency and all conceivable combinations. It is the business of diplomacy to reduce the uncertainty by forming dependable alliances, in order to limit the number of potential opponents against whom we must prepare our armaments.

At the end of this war, if we succeed in destroying the military power of Germany and Japan, there will exist only three great military states—Britain, Russia and the United States. China is only potentially a great power of the future. For though the Chinese are brave and numerous, China is not yet an arsenal, and only a state which can raise great forces and equip them is a great power. France will, we may confidently believe, rise again. But there are not enough Frenchmen to make her one of the great powers of the modern world.

Germany and Japan, we have declared, will not be allowed to become great powers for a long time to come, and if this declaration is to be enforced, the three surviving great powers—Britain, Russia, and the United States—will have to enforce it. They cannot, however, enforce it unless they are allied. If they fail to form an alliance, it will be because they are potential antagonists. Once that potential antagonism is recognized by their dissolving the alliance which exists in order to wage this war, one or all of the three victors will inevitably move towards arrangements with the defeated powers.

This is what happened after 1919: when the victorious alliance dissolved, vanquished Germany made an alliance with victorious Italy and victorious Japan. The state which rejects all alliances will give a high inducement to the other states to form an alliance in which it does not participate. If that state should be America because the American people still want isolation, then we must expect the other powers, who have no such prejudices, to combine for their own security.

The question then is on the formation of an American alliance with Britain and with the Soviet Union.

When we consider the region which the United States must defend, we find that Britain is established within that region as well as outside of it. Canada is in the geographic center of this region. The only land highway to Alaska passes through Canada. All the short airways to Europe and Asia pass over Canada. Thus the geography of air power links the leading dominion in the British Commonwealth inseparately with the United States.

But no matter how boldly we allow ourselves to imagine the range, carrying capacity and striking power of the aircraft of the future, two limitations are unalterable. The first is that aircraft taking off in North America must for civilian purposes be able to land outside of North America—somewhere in Europe, Africa and Asia. A flight is between two airfields on the ground. So without the use of advanced air bases across the oceans, American air power cannot be developed effectively. At the utmost, American air power, with assured use of air bases only in North America, would be condemned to the strategy of the passive defense—to waiting for the enemy to strike if, when and where he chooses. We have already examined the fatal disadvantages of the passive defensive.

The second limitation is that American air power cannot be effective without sea power. It is not practicable by means of the air alone to establish, construct, supply, and defend overseas air bases. Thus for Alaska, destined to be one of the greatest centers of the air power of the future, the use of the land highway across Canada and the command of the seas from our Pacific Coast to the Aleutians are absolutely indispensable.

In regard to Greenland, or a more advanced air base in Iceland, the support of American air power also depends upon sea communications. On one side of that sea lie Canada and the British colony of Newfoundland, and on the other the British Isles. The security of the northern approaches to the American continent is thus inseparably related to the sea and air power of Britain.

The strategic defense of the whole South American continent as it faces the Atlantic is dependent upon sea and air communications, commanded by the outposts of Great Britain. We find the British power projected to Bathhurst and Freetown in West Africa, and to Capetown in South Africa. The British Isles command the northern entrance to the Atlantic. Gibraltar commands the Mediterranean entrance. Capetown commands the southern entrance from the Indian Ocean. The Falkland Islands command the southern entrance from the Pacific Ocean around Cape Horn. Thus the region we must defend can be attacked only from the region over which Britain commands all the approaches by sea.

Moreover, because the defense of Canada is inextricably bound up with the defense of the Western Hemisphere, the British vital interest and the American vital interest are complementary and inseparable. Britain must go to the defense of the Americas or the British Commonwealth of Nations would dissolve. America must go to the defense of the United Kingdom and its positions on the other side of the Atlantic, or run the mortal risk of letting a hostile power establish itself in the near approaches to the Western Hemisphere.

Court Affirms Conviction Of 18 on Sedition Charges

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 20.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today affirmed the conviction of 18 persons affiliated with the Socialist Workers Party on charges of conspiring to undermine the loyalty and discipline of American soldiers and sailors.

"A thorough examination of the record leaves no doubt as to the sufficiency of the evidence and as to the justice of the verdict," Presiding Judge Kimbrough Stone wrote in the opinion, concurred in by Judges Harvey M. Johnson and Walter C. Riddick.

The defendants were convicted in Federal District Court in the first peacetime sedition trial in the Nation's history in Minneapolis by a jury December 1, 1941, and Judge Matthew M. Joyce sentenced them to terms ranging from a year and a day to 16 months.

The original indictment, returned by a Federal grand jury July 15, 1941, named 29 persons. Five of them were acquitted by Judge Joyce and the trial jury acquitted another five.

Grant Dunne, Minneapolis labor leader named in the indictment, committed suicide three weeks before the trial.

Those who were convicted and later appealed were Albert Goldman, New York attorney, who was chief counsel for the defendants; Vincent Raymond Dunne, labor union leader of Minneapolis; James P. Cannon, New York, national secretary of the party; Felix Marrow, New York, editor of the New Militant, official party organ; Mrs. Grace Carlson of Minneapolis, State organizer, and 13 others, all either members of or associated with the Socialist Workers' Party, and who were members of the Twin Cities (Minnepolis-St. Paul) General Drivers Union No. 544.

The trial jury found the 18 defendants innocent on the first count of the indictment, charging conspiracy to overthrow the Government of the United States by force.

However, all were found guilty on the second count, charging them with conspiring to create insubordination in the armed forces of the United States and of distributing literature which advised the "necessity, desirability and propriety of overthrowing and destroying the Government of the United States by force and violence."

'Free Enterprise' Proclaimed Vital Peace Issue by Methodists

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 20.—The Christian Advocate, official publication of the Methodist Church, said today "one of the major problems involved in postwar reconstruction will be the restoration of the American principle of 'free enterprise.'"

"From the moment that actual hostilities cease, the American people will face the immediate necessity of rebuilding their system of representative government," the publication declared.

"At the moment we are living under a bureaucracy made necessary, perhaps, by the war. By various congressional grants of power, the President has been authorized to set up commissions and offices which are, in fact, dictating the most intimate details of life for the plain man on the street.

"To free ourselves of the dictation of these bureaucrats will call for courage and determination of the highest order, for every man in power very naturally considers himself essential to the Nation's welfare, and will contest every effort to dislodge him."

WPB Slashes Newsprint Again By 5%, Warns of 1944 Supply

The War Production Board yesterday announced a 5 percent cut in newspapers' consumption of newsprint on October 1 and told publishers that "a further, perhaps far deeper" curtailment is inevitable next year.

WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson said that even with the new fourth quarter slash, consumption of newsprint in that period will exceed production by 94,000 tons, or about 10 percent.

In a report to Representative Boren (Democrat), Oklahoma, chairman of the House subcommittee investigating newsprint, Nelson said WPB has decided to hold the curtailment to 5 percent in accordance with the newspaper industry's wish. But he warned that by using up its reserve supplies now, the risk of more drastic cuts next year.

Nelson said a shortage of manpower for cutting of pulp wood both in Canada and the United States underlies the newsprint situation.

Even if several remedies now being applied or under study prove successful—including the use of war prisoners and the furloughing of Canadian soldiers—no benefits can be expected for 10 to 18 months, Nelson said, because that much time is required to convert wood to paper.

He indicated disbelief the remedies would be successful unless efforts to increase the cutting of pulp wood bring "unanticipated favorable results."

The newspaper industry advisory committee recommended September 2, the curtailment be limited to 5 percent on a sliding scale basis, with larger papers suffering a proportionately greater share of the curtailment. The newsprint report to Boren was the first disclosure that WPB has concurred.

War Housing Failed Labor, AFL Charges

The American Federation of Labor charged yesterday the war housing program has failed and was contributing to the manpower problem by stimulating labor turnover.

An article in Labor's Monthly Survey, the AFL's official research publication, asserted in its issue this month: "Because the National Housing Agency has not met the need, housing conditions are interfering with war production in many centers."

"One West Coast city," the AFL charged, "can only furnish decent housing for one out of every three new workers coming into these critical jobs; the city needs 7000 houses immediately.

"War workers are living in chicken coops, sleeping in parks and theaters, 1850 workers in this city are housed in substandard quarters.

"In another city, an airplane plant notified the proper Government authorities that it needed 14,000 houses for vital war workers; it was allowed only 1000. Men live so far from their work that they must leave home at 5 a.m. and do not get back until 7 p.m."

The federation charged the NHA completed less than half of its housing program in the fiscal year which ended on June 30.

"This means that the country is short at least 340,000 desperately needed houses in war production centers in last year's program alone," the AFL said.

8000 Needed To Pick Apple, Tomato Crops

More than 8,000 workers for one week each are needed to pick the apple and tomato crops in nearby Virginia and Maryland until the end of next month, John Jones, USES farm recruiting officer, declared yesterday.

"If the urgently needed crops are to be saved from spoilage," he said, "we'll have to find enough people to put in some 60,000 work days during the next few weeks."

Jones disclosed the War Food Administration had requested Government agencies to grant annual leave to all employes who would volunteer for farm work.

"More than 20 major agencies responded favorably," Jones reported, "but it is still too early to judge the result of the move. Until now, anyhow, not enough persons have volunteered."

While the many farming camps in neighboring counties are already in dire need for more help, Jones announced the opening of two additional camps near Basye and Linden, Va., this Sunday, to meet the farming needs.

The USES has set up a recruiting booth at the "Back the Attack" show on the Monument Grounds near Constitution ave. and 15th st., and Jones pointed out that "volunteering for farm labor is certainly one of the finest ways to 'back the attack.'"

Ickes Reports Serious Slump In Output of Hard, Soft Coal

A slump in the production of both hard and soft coal during the week ended September 11 was disclosed by Fuel Administrator Harold L. Ickes yesterday in a report which further dampened hopes of consumers for an easy heating winter.

Coal distributed during that week to New England, Great Lake docks, and Pacific Northwest totaled 1,960,537 tons or 152,057 tons less than during the previous week.

Attributed to Shutdowns

Officials attributed this drop to many shutdowns in mines on Labor Day. While pointing out the amount of coal lost through only a day's partial shutdown, officials stressed that any prolonged shutdowns could do the Nation great harm on the production front as well as in the home.

Coal forwarded to New England during the week amounted to 519,680 tons. Of this, 116,930 tons was anthracite, a drop of 35,585 tons below forwardings of the previous week. Bituminous coal dropped 53,691 tons from the previous week, with a total shipment of 402,750 tons.

Officials declared that last Saturday's appeal by Ickes for self-imposed curtailment on the use of coal by consumers was probably "not the end" of measures which may be necessary to safeguard industry and civilians this winter.

Major Sore Spot

A major sore spot is lack of manpower, it was said. Ickes gave notice to the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain States yesterday that they can expect a shortage of fuel next winter unless more manpower can be quickly recruited.

While the East is not faced with the same situation because fairly large stocks of bituminous coal are on hand, officials declared that mines this side of the Mississippi River also are "in a tough spot." An indicative figure is that about 22,000 tons of anthracite a day is no longer produced because of manpower shortages, officials disclosed.

D. C. Coal Outlook Good

Plenty of coal will be available this winter locally if citizens are normally moderate in demands, it was said here yesterday.

Although only a ton or two is available at a time now, this shortage is due to holdups in summer deliveries by strikes, Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said yesterday. Quantities now being shipped in are expected amply to provide further needs, he added.

Bagdolio Reports Duce Intended to Break With Nazis

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 20 (AP).—Clark Lee, representing the combined American press, said in a dispatch from General Eisenhower's advanced command post tonight that Marshal Badoglio, the Italian premier, disclosed the ousted Benito Mussolini himself was considering a plan to "cut adrift from the Germans by September 15 because Hitler had betrayed him" and revealed Mussolini had thanked Badoglio for saving him from injury after the Fascist Party had ousted him.

Lee reported Badoglio said "if it is true that Hitler is such a friend of Mussolini, why doesn't Mussolini stop German soldiers from attacking harmless citizens guilty of nothing more than being Italians?"

Byrd to Report On Employe Cut Proposal

By Edward Ryan

Post Staff Writer

Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, said yesterday the Joint Economy Committee plans a report to Congress, probably next week, telling what has happened to its recommendation of last June that 300,000 Federal employes be trimmed from the payroll.

In place of a 300,000 reduction, it was learned, figures before the committee indicate that some 12,000 employes have been dropped, and that these cuts have been more than offset by increases.

Senator Byrd said he is still convinced the curtailment of 300,000 or more employes is still feasible, and he said he is hoping to start hearings in the near future to study in detail where the cuts might be made.

"I think that every single department, and agency, is grosely overmanned with clerical personnel," Byrd observed.

At the same time, he cautioned a percentage cut of Federal employment rolls would be "impractical," and that the process of trimming down was primarily one for the agency administrators to handle. The place for the cuts to be made, he said, was in preparation of the annual budget.

Senator Byrd was asked about suggestions circulating in some Capitol quarters that President Roosevelt help give the new tax bill a send-off with some kind of "economy" message to Congress.

Such a message, said Byrd, would help the tax-writers, but he said it ought to be specific in setting out methods for effecting government economies.

F. R. Black, Revenue Unit Attorney, Dies

Forrest R. Black, attorney in the Bureau of Internal Revenue and former professor of law at George Washington University, died Sunday night of a heart ailment in his native Tiffin, Ohio, friends here learned yesterday. He was 49 years old.

Black lived at 6406 Beachwood Drive, Chevy Chase, Md. He had a summer home in Tiffin.

Black, who had been a law teacher in several schools throughout the country, gave up his professorship at George Washington University law school in February, 1937, to join the Department of Justice. He served as an attorney in the antitrust division until he transferred to the Bureau of Internal Revenue in December, 1942. There he was an attorney in the chief counsel's office.

His formal education began at the University of Wisconsin, where he won his B.A. degree. He received his M.A. at Columbia, his LL.D at Ohio State and his Ph. D. from Brookings Graduate School of Government, where he specialized in political science.

Surviving are his wife, Adelaide, and son, Forrest R. Black, jr. Funeral services will be announced later.

Our Chilean Visitor

The cordiality of the welcome which Senor Dr. Don Joaquin Fernandez Fernandez, Foreign Minister of Chile, has received during his stay in Washington is a reflection both of the high personal regard in which he is held by the leaders of our Government and the warmth of the friendship that exists between his country and ours.

Still a young man—his forty-seventh birthday occurs on October 24—Senor Fernandez can look back on a long and very distinguished career in the Chilean foreign service. Before he became foreign minister a year ago he had held posts in Holland, Paraguay, Spain, Italy and France and more recently in Bolivia, Argentina and Uruguay, where he served as Chile's first Ambassador to that country.

When he was recalled to Santiago in October, 1942, to replace Barros Jarpa as foreign minister, his country was faced with the necessity of making a far-reaching decision. Chile was then one of the two remaining nations of Latin America which had not yet broken with the Axis, the other being Argentina. It was to no small extent through the efforts of Senor Fernandez that the break occurred. He took the position that only by sending the Axis delegations at Santiago home could Chile make her full contribution to hemisphere solidarity and be true to her own inspiring tradition. Since then the long-standing and intimate friendship between the United States and Chile has been further cemented by wholehearted cooperation in the great task of continental defense and economic interchange. Into this work Senor Fernandez has thrown himself heart and soul. In saluting him, Washington pays homage to a real statesman and the representative of a great country.

Hiking Payroll Levies

There is such desperate need of new taxes for fighting inflation that one hesitates to raise objections to the proposal to increase social security payroll levies. The Post has repeatedly stated its reasons for believing that the social security contributions should be adjusted with reference to the costs of the social insurance program and not be advanced for the purpose of obtaining more revenue. However, a doubling of payroll levies automatically becomes effective next January under the present law. And Senator Vandenberg, one of the stanchest and most persuasive exponents of the viewpoint we have supported, no longer thinks that the case for further postponement of this increase is "quite so clear—from an actuarial standpoint."

That being the case, a reexamination of the schedule of contributions is clearly in order. But it should be kept in mind that payroll taxes collected from employers fall with very unequal weight upon industrial concerns. On the other hand, levies on employes, if in excess of contributions for bona fide insurance coverage, are simply disguised additions to income taxes, applied to particular groups of wage earners. Yet the Administration has turned a receptive ear to suggestions for boosting payroll taxes, as a revenue measure, while turning aside proposals for levying general sales taxes that would produce much more revenue, reach more people, and, we firmly believe, create less popular irritation than the practice of nibbling away at wages and salaries by compulsory deductions.

Comedy Of Errors

Thomas A. Aurelio, holder of both the Democratic and Republican nominations for justice of the Supreme Court of New York State, will probably have an opportunity to learn what the voters think of his qualifications for this high office. For Supreme Court Justice Dineen has upheld the right of Magistrate Aurelio to retain his place on the ballot, on the ground that under the provisions of the election law the candidate is not disqualified for office. Hence, the Republican and Democratic committees on vacancies were without authority to strike his name from the ballot and substitute new candidates.

It is rather taken for granted that the opinion of Justice Dineen will be upheld on appeal. For Magistrate Aurelio was nominated in proper fashion and is qualified in the eyes of the law for the position to which he aspires. It is highly unfortunate that the candidate's close friendship with a notorious character and alleged racketeer to whom he indiscreetly telephoned a pledge of "undying loyalty" was not publicly disclosed in time to prevent his nomination. But these ties of friendship (which the candidate protests were no more than that), were undoubtedly no secret from at least some of the politicians who helped to engineer the Aurelio nomination. Certainly those ties should have been known to responsible party leaders. The shocked surprise and prompt repudiation of the nominee following the disclosure of his suspect friendship suggest an inexcusable lack of alertness that is discreditable to both parties. If the drawing power of party labels should, as feared, lure voters into casting their ballots for Magistrate Aurelio, a very sad concluding chapter would be written to a sinister comedy of errors.

General Marshall

Clamor over the possibility that Gen. George C. Marshall will be placed at the head of Allied forces in western Europe does no service either to the distinguished Chief of Staff himself or to the United States Army. That the officers serving under him here in Washington should be reluctant to see such a shift is understandable enough. A change at the top might entail a general shake-up all the way down the line. The officers serving overseas, however, British as well as Americans, would probably rejoice at having General Marshall's direct leadership.

When the time comes for an invasion of Europe from the west, the selection of an Allied commander will, of course, be a matter of the very first importance. The post will carry with it tremendous prestige and tremendous responsibility. General Marshall is one of the very few among British and American military leaders who possess the requisite stature. To exclude him from consideration simply because he has done a superlatively fine job as Chief of Staff at home would be patently absurd. It may be, however, that his greatest usefulness to the United Nations cause can be realized in his present position. This is a decision which, we think, can safely be left to himself and to the President.

Between Mr. Roosevelt and General Marshall it is evident that there has been a mutual confidence and a closeness of understanding productive of great benefit to the development of the United States Army. Implications that General Marshall is to be transferred because of a lack of sympathy between him and the President are as mischievous as they are unfounded. Just recently the President manifested his trust in the General by reappointing him Chief of Staff at the expiration of his four-year term. In his report to Congress last week Mr. Roosevelt urged all Americans "to read General Marshall's fine, soldierly record of the achievements of our Army throughout two of the most tremendous years in history."

As Chief of Staff, General Marshall has proved himself something even more than a great soldier. He has shown a profound understanding of the human needs of the millions of men serving under him. He has given the swiftly developed American Army not only great organizational efficiency but also dynamic inspiration. The army which he has built is genuinely democratic both in its composition and in its purposes. His is a quality of leadership which naturally draws to itself the heaviest of responsibilities. He will serve, as he should, wherever the burden upon him is greatest and wherever his service can most effectively advance the democratic cause.

Wanted—Judge

As the opening of the courts' fall term draws near, we are reminded that there is still a vacancy on the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. This place has been vacant since Judge Vinson left the bench to become director of Economic Stabilization last May. Under ideal circumstances a new justice would have been appointed in the early summer so that he would have had time to adjust his personal affairs and familiarize himself with the court's work during the vacation period. Advance preparation is now out of the question, but in any event the appointment should be made on the earliest feasible date.

We hope that the President will take advantage of this opportunity to give the Court of Appeals an able representative of the District bar. At present that court is composed entirely of judges from the States in spite of the fact that a substantial part of the cases it handles are local and the District pays 30 per cent of its expenses. Certainly it should have at least one jurist who has been specially trained in District law and procedure.

There is added incentive for the President to choose a District man this time because of the excellent slate of candidates named by a special committee of the District Bar Association. The three men it singled out are Judge Bolitha J. Laws of the District Court; E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, and Charles Fahy, United States solicitor general. A wide choice is offered here. Yet each of the men suggested would be a credit to the court and would carry to it experience in the practice of law in Washington. With a slate consisting of men of such high caliber before him, and with the ready advice of Attorney General Biddle, it seems that even our overworked President should be able to fill this vacancy without further delay.

We Must Meet It

The Treasury set a high goal—15 billion dollars—for its Third War Loan Drive. High though it may be, it is by no means beyond our reach. But we shall have to do a good deal more stretching than we have yet exacted of ourselves in order to attain it. We are now entering the last lap of the September campaign, and throughout the country as a whole we have raised only two-thirds of the total set for us. In our own District of Columbia we have lagged behind in even greater degree. So far we have barely crossed the halfway mark toward our local quota.

There need be no talk, at this juncture, of failure. We are not, as a nation, going to fall down on our responsibilities. But the individual nature of these responsibilities needs to be better understood. It is no solution to assume that insurance companies and other institutional investors will purchase huge blocks of bonds at the last minute in order to assure the program's success. What is essential to the success of this campaign is that every American should participate to the limit of his individual ability. That is the only way in which the Third War Loan can serve effectively to mop up our huge and dangerous surplus buying power.

The money for the requisite amount of bond buying by individuals is available in the pockets and bank accounts of the American public. But too many of us are yielding to the temptation to use it instead for the purchase of immediate personnel satisfactions. For the week ended September 11 department store sales jumped to 10 per cent over a year ago. This is an indication that people are choosing to spend in the present rather than invest in the future. What is asked of us is temporary self-denial. This is the test by which each of us must judge for himself if he has done his share. Only if we meet this test—all of us—can we reach the real goal of the Third War Loan Drive.

Ban On Union Teachers

The otherwise progressive community of Oklahoma City has canceled contracts with three of its teachers because they objected to a clause barring them from membership in a labor union. This in itself is perhaps less astonishing than the fact that more than 1100 other teachers in the city school system were apparently willing to put their names to a contract of such a medieval nature. One cannot help wondering about the fitness of these teachers to instruct the young if they have learned so little themselves of democratic developments during the twentieth century.

Evidently the Oklahoma City fathers have learned very little on this score. The sort of contract with which they seek to force docility upon their employes runs counter to a strong current of popular thought and of social evolution. Labor unions are now generally recognized as democratic institutions—indeed, as indispensable bulwarks of a free society. The right of men to join in voluntary associations of their own choosing is an inescapable extension and corollary of the right of free assembly. We do not suggest that Oklahoma City should bargain collectively with its teachers. Since unions cannot properly strike against a governmental agency, they do not occupy the same relationship to a city that exists between private employers and employes. But in denying these teachers the right to membership in any labor union, the municipal government, we think, has done violence to the spirit, if not the letter, of our basic civil liberties. One of the dismissed teachers very properly blotted out the antiunion clause of the contract and wrote in longhand in its place, "I am still a citizen of the United States."

THE CREATURE

When I have seen upon some fragile night
How slender and stalkless blooms the tender moon,
How the small stars upon the perilous night
Are trembling blossoms that should wither soon,
Or felt as from afar this leaning earth
Poised dangerously upon the brink of space,
Or pondered the old proud agony of birth
And treacherous life in this alarming place—
Here, where an increased coldness of the air,
A brief degree of heat, a breeze that died,
The slight unbalance, the excessive share
Of anything is death, then, then I cried:
God be my bulwark! Thou hast placed me here
Between these deaths where I am faint with fear.

Australian Labor Party

By Janet R. Keith

Has Won Confidence

RESULTS of the recent general election in Australia revealed an overwhelming popular support of Prime Minister Curtin and his Labor government. The Labor Party will have a majority of about two to one in the new House of Representatives and a clear majority in the Senate.

Since it assumed office in October, 1941, the Labor government has undoubtedly managed to win the confidence of the Australian people. It has achieved this success in spite of severe government policies which have interfered with almost every aspect of Australian life, virtually conscripted labor, drastically increased taxation and reduced civilian comfort to an all-time low.

Austerity Program

The now-famous "austerity" program has reduced output of civilian goods from engaging 68 per cent of the country's manufacturing capacity to engaging only 28 per cent. As a consequence, it is virtually impossible to buy such everyday commodities as clothespins, cooking utensils and baby carriages.

Among the 600 manufactured items on the prohibited list are toys, engagement rings, fur coats, lawn mowers, many cosmetics and most types of candy. Coupon rationing of clothing has been in force for some time. Advertising of rationed goods is rigidly controlled, with even such phrases as "latest style" and "new spring fashion" prohibited.

Civilians who want to travel must apply in writing for a war service permit. Restaurant meals are pegged in price and limited to three courses. Laundry service is rigidly curtailed, with such luxuries as starch-ironing a thing of the past. Even the recent election was conducted under "austerity" regulations, with electoral posters restricted in size to 10 inches by 6 inches, newspaper advertising limited to 6-inch double-column size, and radio time scarce and costly.

A firm manpower policy has resulted in a high degree of mobilization for war. Since February, 1942, the government has had the power to draft for essential work anyone between 16 and 40. Workers in essential industries are frozen in their jobs, and absenteeism on the part of either workers or employers is prohibited.

Because the Labor Party is based on the trade unions, and four of the six state governments are also Labor, trade unionists have backed the government's "work or fight" policy. Wage freezing has been generally accepted because it has been accompanied by an efficient and successful policy of price control.

By the end of 1942, 70 per cent of the adult population (between the ages of 14 and 65) was engaged full time in industry, the armed forces, or civil defense. At the present time three out of every four factory workers are doing direct war jobs. And in July of this year Prime Minister Curtin was able to announce that during the two years his government had been in office the strength of the fighting forces had increased from 431,000 to 820,000. (On a comparative population basis, this would be equal to a United States Army, Navy and Air Force of 15 million men.)

Although Australia was a predominantly agricultural country before the war, her conversion to war industry has been astonishingly successful. It was announced recently that she had equipped, largely from her own resources, her land forces with practically all types of major munitions. In addition she has aided Dutch and New Zealand forces, and supplied equipment under the principle of "lend-lease in reverse" to American forces stationed in Australia.

Strong Leadership

Much credit for the success of the government's policies must go the strong leadership of Curtin himself and the outstanding ability of Dr. H. V. Evatt, his Minister for External Affairs. Three days after he assumed office, Curtin struck a determined keynote in his broadcast to the Australian people: "Let it be clear—Australia's war effort will be increased. We know that only the very uttermost will suffice, and we are determined that it will be achieved."

When Mr. Curtin stood for reelection this summer he could remind Australians that the Labor government has accelerated the war effort, increased social services at an approximate annual cost of $32,500,000, limited the rise in retail prices to 24½ per cent, and adjusted ceiling price formulae to raise the income of the primary producer.

For the future he promised that postwar reconstruction would be developed to the blueprint stage, so that there would be no delays in beginning work after the war. Bills already prepared for consideration of the new Parliament deal with the question of preference to service personnel, sickness and unemployment benefits and completion of the national welfare scheme before the end of the war. From now on the primary consideration in every proposal relating to the war effort will be whether it makes maximum contribution to the Southwest Pacific, except where Australian contribution is justifiable elsewhere.

The Net Tightens Around Hitler

THREE WEEKS after Italy surrendered to the Allies, the Italian army won its first victory of the war.

Significantly, that victory occurred on Italian soil—the island of Sardinia—and over German troops.

Elsewhere—on the French Riviera, in the Balkans, on the island of Rhodes in the Dodecanese and on the Italian peninsula itself—Italy's capitulation to the Allies was followed by the disarming of Italian garrison troops by their erstwhile brothers-in-arms.

In Sardinia the reverse was true. There it was the Italians who imposed their will on the Germans, forcing the latter to seek refuge on the neighboring island of Corsica where, it is reported, fighting between Italian troops and French patriots, on the one side, and German troops, on the other, is now in progress.

THUS, as an extra dividend of the Italian surrender and without having to strike a blow, the Allies came into possession of an important offensive vantage point in the vicinity of central and northern Italy. And since it is doubtful whether the Germans in Corsica can long hold out we shall soon have fields within fighter range of southern France.

But while the most fruitful, most important consequences of the expulsion of the Germans from Sardinia are likely to be those related to the Allied employment of air power the victory itself was primarily a victory for sea power.

There are two reasons why the Germans were in no position to reinforce their garrisons in Sardinia to the point where they could disarm the two Italian divisions on the spot and stay in possession of the island.

The first reason is that with the demands on German manpower growing apace as a result of the defeats in Russia, the necessity of replacing Italian garrisons in the Balkans and elsewhere and the restiveness of Hitler's satellites, Germany simply does not have enough men to go around. Some vulnerable areas must be left relatively unguarded. Sardinia was one of those areas.

But in Sardinia's case a related factor of decisive importance was that any German reinforcements and most of the supplies needed by them would have had to come by sea, across the water gap separating Sardinia from Italy and France. But Germany lacks both the merchant shipping and the naval power necessary to run the Allied gantlet in the Mediterranean.

SOME DISAPPOINTMENT has been expressed because the large Italian naval force which surrendered to the Allies will not be available, at least not immediately, for active combat against the Nazis.

Actually, the disappearance of the Italian fleet as a factor in the Mediterranean is in itself a development of tremendous importance. It means that Allied naval power which was needed to immobilize the Italian warships will now be available for other duties, both in the Mediterranean and elsewhere, particularly in the Pacific.

Because of this circumstance the same difficulty which Germany had in retaining Sardinia is likely to be repeated on other Mediterranean islands, including Crete, the Dodecanese and the Greek islands of the Aegean.

These islands together have served the Nazis as an effective barrier against an Allied invasion of Greece and Bulgaria. That barrier is now crumbling.

Some of the lesser Dodecanese Islands are already in Allied hands. The others, including Rhodes, are now directly under Allied guns. It is doubtful whether the Germans can long continue to hold on to them.

So in the Eastern as well as the Central Mediterranean the military balance of power is shifting in favor of the Allies and the net around the Reich is being drawn tighter.

THE DEVELOPMENTS in the Mediterranean theater as a whole, however, vastly important as they are, are overshadowed by what is happening on the Eastern Front.

There, under the terrific pressure of the Red Army, the Wehrmacht is being forced to give up one bastion after another. Its major communication lines are being cut, the once solid front is, so far as the Germany army is concerned, being divided up into a series of unrelated sectors with the German forces in nearby sectors unable to come to each other's aid.

Should the Germans retreat no further than the Dnieper, the Russian offensive of this year will probably prove to be the most decisive of the war. But there is now no certainty that the Germans will be able to entrench themselves along the Dnieper.

Should the Russians take Smolensk, now a possibility, the Dnieper line would be flanked and a further German withdrawal would then become inevitable. And with each mile that the Red Army moves west the Russian air force gets that much nearer the once safe German industrial areas in east Germany and Poland and the Danube lifeline.

Poetry Answers Everything

Your correspondent, Laura K. Pollock, is doubtless right when she says that it seems "bad form for persons of importance to allow themselves to become hilarious in public places when boys of all nations are being killed or wounded on all fronts"; but I am wondering whether we should ever laugh again if we waited until the world is free of misery and want and pestilence and fear, or until human beings are not dying unnecessarily from one cause or another by the thousands or millions. Haven't the Four Horsemen always been riding, riding, riding? Right now it is a war—a war that's beginning to strike home; and there are some of us, we admit, who don't feel like laughing some of the time, either publicly or privately.

But if there are those who do, and can—more power to 'em. And I doubt whether even the boys who are being killed or wounded like to think of the home front as a home front of sour-pusses. Poetry has an answer for everything, and Prof. Morris Bishop, Ph. D., of Cornell University (God bless him!) has put it very memorably indeed:

We are the generation
That is too early wise;
We look upon creation
With clear, untroubled eyes.
We see the world's illusion,
We know that we must bear
Deep in our minds, confusion,
Deep in our hearts, despair.

Our dreary fathers bound us
Apprentices to pain;
The great machines impound us,
Freedom and joy are vain;
No light, and no interstice
In the blind, trackless wood.
(What makes me feel the worst is I'm feeling pretty good.)

And sorrow's shafts in plenty
Within us mortify;
The lads of one-and-twenty
In sixty years must die.
Agony is our master!
We must surrender to Despair, death, doom, disaster!
Toodle-y-oodle-y-oo!

Conscripting Labor

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." Thus did Thomas Jefferson foresee and warn us against the pitfalls that constantly threaten our freedom. The danger is not so great in peacetime, but during wartime, in our fear of domination from outside, we forget to be "vigilant" in our own backyard. Can we, in patriotic fervor, allow Nazism to sprout and grow here in our own free America? That we will be doing if we permit the passage of the Austin-Wadsworth bill. Conscription of labor is the most un-American move that has been made since we entered the war. We are now told how much we shall be paid, how many hours we shall work, and whether or not we can quit our jobs. Shall we now allow the passage of the Austin-Wadsworth bill and be told where we shall work and exactly what work we shall do?

How can we ask our boys, who have fought so bravely, in this war for the "freedoms," to return to the very type of life they have been fighting against?

Let us preserve for them the freedom for which they fight, and begin to build the really free America. K. S.

Sentiment Expressed

A recent letter in your paper from a Mr. Marsh of Catlett certainly expressed the feeling of other dairymen serving the Washington milk shed.

We have been sending milk to Washington at less than a cent per quart increase, while hay has advanced from 15 to 25 and 30 dollars a ton; dry feed from 28 to 65 and other feeds in like proportion, we have been selling at practically cost for some time. Now the drought has increased our expenses and the price of milk remains the same.

Let the consumer pay for his milk or go without it. He will have to anyway unless there is an advance in price to the producer.

And why is the Government so determined to protect the consumer while it lets the producer drown? That is something the voting dairyman would like to know.

Thoughts on Bankers

The American Bankers Association has been holding a convention in New York, and they say that when one banker met another the greeting was "Hello. What do you hear about money?"

And that the reply was, "They tell me that, as unsatisfactory as it is these days, nobody's found a suitable substitute."

We always like to study the group photos taken at bankers' conventions. The faces are so severe. But it's tradition. It has always been accepted as a fact that if the depositors saw a banker with a broad grin they would feel nervous.

Not us. We would feel much better about it if we saw the bankers going in for the old ear-to-ear smile. Of course, it is harder for a banker to smile now than it has ever been. There used to be zest, excitement and even fun in the business. In the duller moments he could dash off those forgotten appeals, "Let Your Money Earn Money With Us," "A Bank Account Works While You Sleep" and "Watch Your Savings Grow."

How different today! Now a banker has to shut himself off from the public so it won't ask him to receive some more money!

He has to keep himself in a little office far off in a corner so he won't be bothered by people who think they know him so well that he will permit them to make a big savings deposit.

We noticed one banker in a group convention picture who looked particularly severe and depressed. There was a good reason. Only 48 hours before the picture was taken a citizen had come to his bank and actually tried to get him to accept a deposit exceeding $5000 in a savings account. People are so heartless with their money.

There was one other face that registered annoyance, too. It was that of a banker who had recently been asked to make a loan on some good real estate. The very idea!

Oh, for the days when the banks were bustling, busy, exciting centers of American life, when thrift was a pretty catchy word, when you could even get interest on checking accounts, when a banker would help you buy anything from the Empire State Building to Casey's bar and when every bank had a poster in the window with a finger pointing at you and an inscription, "Your Money Makes Money For You Here"!

And what a thrill it would be to encounter again the bank president who used to drop everything and greet you personally if you came in to open an account! Oh, boy!

No wonder bankers look sad. We're sad about the whole thing, too.

With Belt in the Back?

"FOR SALE—Tent, 18 x 50. All or half. Henry Wayman, Green top."—Adv. in a Jersey newspaper.

If you're having any trouble at your tailor's maybe this is your chance.

"Dancer, Fitzgerald & Sample" is the name of a new advertising firm, and it intrigues this department. There is a lift to the name, and a suggestion of music, rhythm and something for free. "Miss Weems, how about that Dancer call? . . . Did you get Sample? . . . Take a letter to 'Fitzie'."

Senator Reynolds

"Give a dog a bad name and you may as well kill him." Call a man a playboy and no amount of hard and useful work he may ever do will quite satisfy his critics. A good example of the foregoing is a letter appearing recently in your column about Senator Reynolds. Bob Reynolds has a natural, buoyant, and likeable personality. To some folk such a nature is unbecoming a Senator. Bob Reynolds started from scratch; is a born actor, it is true, but he has matured perceptibly as a Senator.

Long ago he advocated fortifying our outlying possessions; got a place on the Military Affairs Committee because he honestly believed he would be more useful there than in banking; and he has consistently warned against the Nation's enemies, within and without. He has traveled—yes; but how else could he learn first-hand what a Senator ought to know about armies and countries? As the chairman of the powerful Military Affairs Committee it is his duty to challenge, "to prove the need" of every person and cause—brass hats or lilywhite pacifists—who come seeking privilege and preference.

No, he is no Solomon, seer, or saint. Like most of us, little and big, he has guessed wrong at times; but at present he is a conscientious, hard-working member of the Senate doing an important job well. Finally, when it comes to standing up and being counted, the records will show that he is usually on the side of the little man's interests, sympathies, and hopes. Isn't that really something in a democracy?

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Conversations With Russia

LIPPMANN

IN THE CONVERSATIONS now in progress with Russia the question which underlies all others is the settlement with Germany. If we can reach an agreement on this, all the other issues, not only in Europe but in East Asia and the Pacific, must and will yield to diplomacy. For an agreement by Britain and America with Russia on the future of Germany is the cardinal agreement which will exclude the possibility of another great war for a long time to come. Then and only then will there be the prospect of peace.

The failure to reach such an agreement would make the post-war era one of preparation and maneuver for another great war in our generation.

THERE APPEARS to be a radical difference of opinion between the Russians and ourselves. They have sponsored the idea of a negotiated peace with a "free German" government, whereas we stand for unconditional surrender followed by a military government of Germany. But there is good reason to think that these are two partial, incomplete views of the same problem, arising out of the fact that Stalin, Churchill and Roosevelt have been until recently so preoccupied with the conduct of war that none has been able to explore thoroughly, much less all three of them together, the real problems of a settlement. So while they have organized the war with great professional thoroughness, they have thus far improvised in their spare moments on the longer-ranged political issues.

It is, however, clear that with the military situation in hand, the time has come for serious attention to the diplomatic.

IT CAN be shown, I think, that both the Free Germany proposal from Moscow and the unconditional surrender formula from Casablanca beg the question. Thus we may ask the Russians what guaranties they intend to take that a free German government will not be a democratic facade behind which the military caste, the Nazi Party, the pan-Germans, the secret police, conspire, as they did during the Weimar Republic, for the revival of German military power 15 or 20 years hence. The Russians, on the other hand, may ask us how we propose to end the military government we mean to set up, and how we propose to find a German government which we can rely upon when our troops are withdrawn.

A THOROUGH SEARCH for an answer to these two difficult questions must bring us to a common ground. The Russians are bound to seek military guaranties which make it certain that a democratic German government cannot be undermined by an underground militarist conspiracy and propaganda. For a free Germany can remain free and hope to become strong and reliable only if it is certain that, for at least a generation, it cannot be subverted.

We, on the other hand, are bound to seek the constituent elements of a free and reliable Germany within the framework of our military guaranties. We do not wish to be bothered forever with the government of Germany, and we could not be even if we now thought so.

The two formulae are, therefore, complementary, the Russians emphasizing a free Germany and we emphasizing the guaranties against the revival of militarist Germany. The common ground is to promote a free Germany within the framework of indisputably adequate military guaranties.

WHAT ARE adequate guaranties? In the last analysis they are the firmly agreed conviction in Russia, Britain, and America that they will unite in enforcing a treaty of peace which forbids the reconstitution of German militarism.

If the three great powers write such a treaty of peace, and if we and all the other United Nations ratify it, we shall have, I submit, the one military commitment necessary to establish peace in the Western world. Upon that foundation we can erect a larger association for the settlement of secondary disputes, for the development of international law, and the promotion of commerce and welfare.

WE MUST FIX it in our minds that the paramount issue is whether we unite in order to make certain that Germany does not make a third bid for world domination. If we do unite on this issue, we shall all have the reality of the alliances we need for our security, and the assurance of peace that must be had before any larger and looser association can be set up. For the larger association cannot prevent war: it can flourish only if great wars have already been rendered impossible.

If we do not unite with the Russians on the German question, then Germany is bound to return to militarism. For our failure to agree will mean one terrible and momentous thing: that we shall bid against each other in the post-war era for the military support of Germany. It would mean that either the Russians or the British and ourselves will favor the revival of the German military power in the disastrous attempt to win the new Germany away from each other.

That would be the absolutely certain prelude to a Third World War. We should then have squandered our victory, and the only possible gainers would be those Germans who will dream of revenge and will plot for another chance at the domination of the world.

THIS BEING the essential truth, it will prevail once the heads of all three governments put their whole minds on the problem, and make sure that the current conversations are conducted by men who deal in the realities rather than in the incidents, who know that the world is round and not flat, who see the forest as well as the trees, the shrubs, and the weeds.

Wildcat Oil Production

Lag Denied by OPA

By the Associated Press

Sumner Pike, chief of the Office of Price Administration petroleum price division, denied yesterday an often-made charge that OPA's refusal to allow a crude oil price increase had put a damper on exploration for oil.

Pike told a Senate committee investigating a farm gasoline shortage—and gasoline prices—that wildcat drilling this year is surpassing all former records.

Indications are, he said, that 3300 wildcat wells will be drilled this year as against 3219 last year, 3264 in 1941, 3038 in 1940 and 2589 in 1939.

Record Made Last Year

"More fields also were brought in last year than ever before," Pike said. "There doesn't appear to be much basis for the charge that OPA ceiling prices have ruined wildcatting."

Pike said, however, the Nation's oil production has not kept pace with demand, and predicted that importation of oil would have to be increased "in the near future."

Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota said he understood plans called for importing one billion barrels of oil next year, and Pike said that sounded "logical."

When Senator Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico asked why OPA opposed an increase in the crude oil price, which Hatch said "unquestionably" would spur production in this country, Pike stated:

"In the first place we are getting as much or more drilling under existing prices as we ever had, and in the second place our figures show the producers are making more profit than ever."

Reason for Shortages

Pike said shortages of gasoline for farm use, particularly in the East, resulted "very clearly from a transportation shortage" rather than from a lag in production or exploration for new oil pools.

Meanwhile Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes expressed grave concern over the manpower shortage in the oil fields, which he said has delayed drilling of individual wells as much as 90 days.

He said in a statement that results of a partly completed survey indicate that unless former oil workers can be induced to return to the industry, the wildcat and oil field development programs will fall far behind schedule.

Broadcaster Doubts Voice Was Mussolini's

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Max Jordan, former European manager for the National Broadcasting Co., expressed belief tonight that the voice purporting to be that of Benito Mussolini in a European broadcast Saturday was not that of the deposed Fascist leader.

The speaker urged Italians to take up arms again by the side of Germany and Japan. London radio monitors believed the speaker actually was Mussolini.

Jordan was in Rome 20 years and knew Mussolini even before he became dictator.

"There absolutely is no similarity in the enunciation or articulation of the two voices," said Jordan, "and I am allowing for the fact that Mussolini may be ill and depressed."

New Blood For The Cabinet

PUSEY

SECRETARY Hull's reluctance to go to Moscow for the forthcoming meeting of foreign secretaries brings into the limelight one of the most striking paradoxes of the Roosevelt Administration. Six years ago the President fought the hardest fight of his career to infuse "new blood" into the Supreme Court. But he has scarcely turned over a finger to infuse "new blood" into his own Cabinet.

It is said that Secretary Hull will go to the momentous gathering which is expected to be held in Moscow if his doctor will permit him to make such an arduous trip. He will be 72 years old next month and his health in recent years has sometimes been poor. His lack of enthusiasm for an aerial jaunt to Moscow can be readily understood. Yet it would be a tragic culmination of his career if personal considerations should prevent the United States from being adequately represented at a conference that may have a vital bearing upon the future peace of the world.

The dilemma in which Secretary Hull thus finds himself is all the more pointed because he has just forced out of the Department of State the able and energetic Undersecretary, Sumner Welles. The younger and more ambulatory Mr. Welles could have gone to Moscow as readily as the President went to Casablanca. But the arguments for young blood seem to have been forgotten in this case.

Nor can we suppose that Moscow is the only distant world capital that our Secretary of State will be called upon to visit in the next few years. Undoubtedly there will be important business in London and Chungking and perhaps in Rio de Janeiro or Istanbul. Our chief of foreign affairs ought to be prepared to jaunt to any part of the world where important international issues or momentous questions involving our national interests are being settled. We can scarcely pursue a "one-world" diplomacy through a stay-at-home Secretary of State.

THE QUESTION I raise is not, of course, that of disability resulting from old age. Some men are senile at 40. Others are physically active and mentally keen beyond 75. Look over the list of Cabinet members and ask yourself who is the strongest and ablest man of the lot. It may easily be Secretary of War Stimson, who reaches his seventy-sixth milestone today.

Then look for the least influential man in the Cabinet. You will see at a glance that he is the youngest of the lot—Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, who clings to his title in spite of the fact that most of the important functions which used to be in his domain have been transferred to War Food Administrator Marvin Jones.

Three other members of the Cabinet are approaching three score years and ten—the age at which the President once thought Justices of the Supreme Court should be put under pressure to retire. They are Secretaries Ickes, Knox and Jones, each of whom is 69. Here again age proves to be no guide in judging competence, energy and administrative ability. Certainly Mr. Ickes gives more driving power to his war job than many administrators in or out of the Cabinet who are much younger than he.

Yet if we look at the Cabinet as a whole it is sadly deficient in that young blood on which the President laid so much store when he was attempting to reorganize the Supreme Court. Today he has succeeded in getting a youngish court. The average age of the justices must be substantially less than that of Cabinet members. Indeed, the President has raided his own administrative agencies to put such human dynamos as William O. Douglas in the stately atmosphere of the Supreme Bench. But his Cabinet, where boundless energy and administrative skill can be used to much greater advantage, has never been given a comparable overhauling.

TODAY the Cabinet and several wartime agencies outside the Cabinet are urgently in need of younger blood. And this does not mean the replacement of alert and intelligent executives merely because they happen to be advanced in years, but the filling of top policymaking jobs by men of flexible minds and relentless energy. This is a day of rapid changes which are shaking our civilization to its foundations. The nature of the problems with which governments must grapple is such that only the most alert, bold and forward-looking leadership can save us from the pit of confusion where the seeds of new wars and depressions flourish.

As applied to Secretary Hull, the question is not merely whether his health will permit him to go to Moscow but whether he will do more than rake over the cold principles that have guided him in the past when he gets there. Vital as it is to cling to sound general principles, the revolutionary state of affairs in the world today calls for the fashioning of those principles into bold policies. Mr. Hull's recent public utterances give no indication that he has the vision, the resourcefulness or the temperament to shape a foreign policy that can be projected into the world of tomorrow.

This question of new Cabinet leadership to meet new problems must be faced courageously, without regard for sentiment or politics.

Willkie Would Accept GOP Nomination Or Support Party on Liberal Platform Basis

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Wendell Willkie said today if the Republican Party adopted a liberal platform in 1944 he would "give it my complete and undeviating service, whether as the convention's nominee or as a worker in the ranks."

The Republican presidential nominee of 1940, writing in Look Magazine, gave that answer to this question asked by its editors:

"Will you be available for the Republication nomination for President in 1944?"

Elaborating on his answer, Willkie said:

"I see within a liberal Republican Party the possibility of the formation of a real team, the members of which can work together for the accomplishment of common purposes. No such team exists in the Democratic Party at the present time, nor can it exist in 1944.

Democrats Divided

"The Democratic Party is torn asunder by conflicting forces . . . there is emerging a new spirit in our party, a spirit of progress and determination. . . . The new spirit, I believe, is right now building a party fit to govern, a party that knows itself and its objectives. If those objectives are the liberal ones I believe them to be, I want to be on the team."

A liberal platform, Willkie said, must include "five indispensable planks," which he said were (1) "while Democratic government rests on majority rule, the essence of freedom is the protection of minorities," (2) "efficient, well-managed and economical administration," (3) "a rebirth of enterprise—real enterprise," (4) extension of Social Security and absolute guarantees against unemployment and want, (5) a new foreign policy "by which we and other nations can assure our future safety and promote our mutual interests. The biggest job that faces the party right now is to crystallize its thinking on the form that our participation should take in the post-war world."

Criticizes New Deal

Willkie said it was necessary to distinguish between "enterprise and private ownership" and said "we must prevent the further misuse of the word 'enterprise' by those who wish merely to preserve their idle capital and their vested powers."

"We must give the word a meaning for every American, whether big or little, and whether he owns his own business or not," he said. "Workers on the production line are also enterprisers—or should have an opportunity to be."

He criticized the New Deal's pre-Pearl Harbor foreign policy, and said "the proficiency of the administration in foreign affairs is a myth that will have to be carefully examined by the people before November, 1944.

"I fthe Republican Party thinks it can coast into power in 1944 without meeting the liberal challenge, it will be rudely disillusioned," Willkie said. ". . . I say the first step toward victory in 1944 must be a victory of the liberal forces within the Republican Party itself."

Missouri Republicans recently asked Willkie a series of questions, including one as to what he meant by a liberal platform, and whether he would actively support the party nominee if he should not be chosen. Willkie said he would meet Missouri leaders later to discuss them.

Will Rogers Favors Postwar Alliances

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Representative Will Rogers, jr. (Democrat) of California said last night America must "enter into a close and lasting alliance with England, Russia and China" as the sole alternative to a third world war.

Rogers, son of the late Will Rogers, made the statement upon his arrival at La Guardia airport aboard a Pan American Airways clipper which brought him from England, where for seven weeks he had toured United States fighter and bomber stations and conferred with British officials. He also briefly visited Ireland.

Rescue Unit Saves Pilot a Day

The Navy announced yesterday that a special aerial rescue unit established at Guadalcanal had averaged nearly one shot-down American pilot a day picked up in the Solomons, many from "under the noses of the Japanese."

Maj. Michael Sampas, Marine airman on Guadalcanal, was commended by Admiral William F. Halsey, commander, South Pacific Area for the work of the unit. He organized the special air rescue service and flew many of the pick-up missions into enemy waters himself, the Navy said.

During the 106-day period, April 1 to July 15, 1943, Sampas' unit rescued 337 persons. Of these, 100 were pilots or plane crewmen who crash-landed or parachuted to safety, 219 were listed as "evacuees" and 18 were classed simply as "miscellaneous." No explanation was given as to where the persons picked up by Solomons unit were rescued, but it was said that some of the evacuees were Chinese.

Randolph Seeks Early Hearing on Engraving Pay Rise

Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia yesterday revealed that he intended to ask for hearings as soon as posible before the Civil Service Committee on his bill to allow all employes of the Bureau of Engraving 15 per cent night differential pay.

At present, the night pay goes only to skilled workers. Randolph said his bill would bring the Engraving pay in line with that of the Government Printing Office.

He added that he also was interested in increased pay for all night workers in the Government. The statement was made to United Federal Workers of America, a CIO organization.

Red Heroism in Closeup Coming to Little's Screen

A NEW INSIGHT into the love of country and selfless courage of the Russians will be afforded Capital picturegoers when "Black Sea Fighters" opens its first Washington engagement at the Little Theater on Wednesday.

MADELEINE CARROLL

Previewed yesterday morning, this less than an hour long subject, photographed by Red cameraman with both the ground and sea forces in action, is a grim and glorious epic of heroism and indomitable spirit.

With the siege of Sevastopol as its major symbol of the valor of the armed forces and the civilian population, the action radiates over a wide arc. The greatest commando raid yet brought to the screen occupies an important footage; there is a night sea battle as realistic and vivid in certain of its aspects as the opening of the attack on El Alamein by the British Eighth Army in "Desert Victory."

Then there is Sevastopol itself, which Mr. Schickelgruber boasted would fall in less than a week. After one of the most magnificent defenses in history, it fell at the end of 375 days. Out of the mountains of rubble that had been a gay and beautiful city of 100,000, only 11 buildings reared themselves intact when the Nazis entered. For this short-dozen, Hitler paid the staggering price of 350,000 men and colossal material.

Of this sort of sublime devotion to country is "Black Sea Fighters" made. A complete review, along with the sharply contrasted Hollywood release to be combined with it on the same bill, will appear on this page in due course.

In the meantime, save a date for "Black Sea Fighters" and learn with your own eyes what it is that has been overwhelming the Nazi invaders on the Eastern front this past week. You'll find out.

That "sharply contrasted subject" opening Wednesday at the Little, incidentally, will be "My Favorite Blonde." If you don't recall it, we will that this lively item, costarring Bob Hope and Madeleine Carroll, is one of the most enlivening espionage comedies that have come out of the war.

Director George Vivian of Washington's Academy of the Theater drops ward under date of September 18 that his friends and sponsors, Helen Menken, Edward G. Robinson—now starring on the Earle screen in "Destroyer"—Eugenie Leontievich, coauthor with Elena Miramova of "Dark Eyes," last week's attraction at the National; Gene Buck, Tyrone Power and Charles Winninger, have forwarded checks for the purchase of $25 war bonds to be presented to the first six male enrollees for the Academy's new term, beginning October 4. One each, of course. Almost the equivalent of a limited scholarship.

'ff to a Flying Start

Fred McMillan, manager of the Warner Brothers Silver Theater, jumped the gun on his associates around the circuit by staging a war bond rally in the Silver Spring house a week ago Sunday night, which turned in sales to the trim sum of $15,000. But he had plenty of pulchritudinous help. His "sales girls" were the Earle Theater Roxyettes, who auctioned off the orchids they were wearing, with our old working mate, Norman Brokenshire, veteran radio commentator, as m. c. The patriotic touch was supplied by a color guard from the Cissel-Saxon Post 41, American Legion, dressing both sides of the stage.

That, however, was only a tune-up for the Roxyettes. Just as they did in the last bond campaign, the Earle's 16 sirens have pledged themselves to raise $500,000 in bond sales during the Third War Loan drive. There seems little doubt that the girls will achieve their goal. They are super-salesmen. That $15,000 out at the Silver was turned over in less than 20 minutes. Last night's rally was at the Earle Theater, immediately preceding the 9 o'clock performance, with Billy Repaid, of WOL, as m. c., auctioning the orchids, delivered to the bond purchaser by his or her favorite Roxyette. Final returns not in as this is written.

Speaking of such, the gentlemen (sic) of the drayma desks are being luncheoned today by the District of Columbia War Activities Committee of the picture biz at the 400 Club to learn the details of a new activity deemed of high importance. Obviously, the nature of this new development, whatever it is, cannot be passed along "until we eat again."

ED WYNN,

"Simple Simon," the "Perfect Fool," who, with the aid of a talented company of singers, dancers and specialty artists, last night chased gloom out of the National Theater and exiled it for the week ending next Sunday night. The medium of the banishment is a variety show-revue, bearing the title of "Big Time." Anything in which Ed Wynn appears would be

Wynn and His Stellar Artists A Smash Hit in 'Big Time'

By Nelson B. Bell

"BIG TIME." Fred Finklehoffe and Paul Small present Ed Wynn in a variety-revue, in two acts, with Paul Haakon and Patricia Bowman, Cross and Dunn, Marie Nash, Bob Dupont, Paul La Varre and Brother, Coleman Clark & Co., Con Colleano, Eleanor Niles, Nancy Hill and Nina Crane. At the National Theater.

"Big Time," the musical melange Ed Wynn brought into the National Theater last night, is described on the program as a "variety-revue." Mr. Wynn thinks it ought to be called a "vauderiety." Neither has quite hit the nail on the head. What it is, is a smash hit.

Stripped of chorus and the elaborate trappings of revue, the two acts do take the form of glorified vaudeville. With them it would be a revue of gargantuan proportions thickly punctuated with show-stopping acts. Every featured performer on the bill is an artist.

With the incomparable Wynn introducing them all, participating ridiculously in the specialties of many and interlarding the evening's proceedings with comic excerpts from numerous of his earlier hits and a running fire of new jets, "Big Time" becomes an entertainment unique in its ability to titillate and enthuse an audience for almost three hours.

With the improvisation of smart gowns on Eleanor Niles, Nancy Hill and Nina Crane, three stunning models, and the mobile piano interlude, with Marie Nash perched atop it singing, remembered from "Boys and Girls Together"; the "angle-gun" nonsense from one of the star's still earlier vehicles, and the comic conceits of perhaps the most resourceful comedian in the American theater, it is preponderantly Ed Wynn's show, but by no means exclusively so.

Duo Without A Peer

Allen Cross and Henry Dunn, the song stylists who have given the contemporary stage a singing duo that far excels the immensity popular Van and Schenck of the 1920's, last evening, with the encouragement of Mr. Wynn, who was trying to regain the stage, scored the hit of their lives. Cross and Dunn are in a class by themselves. Fortified with "song stories" of exceptional caliber and quality, they enhance the value of their material by the preciseness and polish of its interpretation.

Of equal artistic stature are Patricia Bowman and Paul Haakon in the field of ballet and the dance. In his solo ballet and castanet numbers, Haakon revealed a buoyancy and grace that were superb and Miss Bowman in her syncopated toe number was no less emphatically the artiste. Together, they executed a polka that was intricate, humorous and delightful.

After Mr. Wynn's hilarious introductory monologue, Con Colleano, wizard of the tight wire, was the first specialist introduced. Colleano executes feats on the slender, taut strand that few can do on the ground. He has raised equilibrium to an art. The same is true of juggling, as it is done by Bob Dupont, the dexterous fellow who eats an apple at every performance while employing it as one of the tools of his trade. We have been watching Bob for many years now and never saw him as good as he was last night.

Is Rich in Diversity

Paul LaVarre and Brother are a pair of gymnasts of unusual skill who affords the ubiquitous Wynn his first opportunity to get thoroughly mauled by rushing in where he should have known better.

As prima donna of the two acts, Marie Nash sings liltingly the songs she decorates with an ingratiating personality and striking personal beauty.

Reverting to the vaudeville tradition for the opening of the second act, Colman Clark, table tennis champion, with Allen Thomas as his opponent and Lew Perry as announcer and referee, gives a lightning demonstration of the fine points of the game—which he lost last night by the score of 9 to 6.

Not a spectacular production in the usual sense, "Big Time" still is effectively and tastefully staged, with a freshness that belies its long run on the West Coast and cross-country tour to the East.

It is, in a nutshell, as amusing, amiable and invigorating a frolic as anyone is apt to come across in a season of first-nighting. The extension of the engagement through two matinees and a night performance next Sunday probably will not be enough to accomodate all the judicious show-shoppers who will want to see it.

'The Fledgling' Sprouts Its Wings

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 20.—Metro has closed for "The Fledgling," Jacques Duval's new play laid in Morocco. It concerns a young American lieutenant on leave, taking a trip with a French captain. Pierre Aumont would have been perfect for that. They need a French girl for the lead. How about Michele Morgan? . . . Helen Forrest, singer with Harry James, joins "Mr. Co-Ed" to do an acting chore with Red Skelton. They met 10 years ago in Atlantic City at a walkathon—remember those?—he as M. Phil Regan's five-times-weekly airshow has given him such a large audience he's being called "The housewives' dream boy." Twentieth Century is finally doing something about that buildup promised him.

Warners is about to sign for Ketti Frings' new story, "The Man Up There." Ketti has her own angle on heaven. Story's about a soldier dying in a foxhole who dreams he goes straight to heaven. Don't they all? At Heavenly Bend Junction, he discovers every religion has its own old man who runs a boarding house for the folks who pass through—a happy little town except for members from the Third Reich. They're slightly confused because all the other places have an old man. Theirs is still on earth. They're anxiously awaiting him. . . . Remember Dorothy Jordan? She's expecting her third child daily, while husband Merian Cooper, General Chennault's aide, is still in the Far East. . . . Fred Brady, Metro comic, bought a house in West Los Angeles, so he can take himself out of that phone booth he had a lease on. . . . Jane Withers' collection of chevrons from Army boys have all been put together and made into a sport coat. Is she envied!

Sergt. Carl Bell, from Rising Sun, Tex., was the one-millionth man to visit the Hollywood Canteen. He lived the life of Riley for three days—was put up at a good hotel with breakfast in bed, visited stars at three studios, shook hands with the mayor, went to Mocambo with Joan Leslie, Deanna Durbin, Bonita Granville, Anne Shirley, and three buddies from Fort MacArthur—besides getting oodles of presents and kisses at the canteen. He's 33, married, with two children.

"If you think this is bad," Ince told them, "you should have been with me in Budapest in the fall of 1918." At that time a Hungarian producer was preparing a production of "The Merry Widow," and made a long search for a leading man. On November 1, 1918, Ince, then an agent, received a desperate 'phone call from the producer. "Well, I have a man who can sing," said Ince, "but he's fat and bald and has only one leg. Would you care to see him?" . . . "No, I don't care to see him," shouted the producer. "Just sign him."

ICC Orders Open Hearing On Bid Issue

The Interstate Commerce Commission agreed yesterday to hold a public hearing on the question of requiring competitive bidding in all sales of railroad and other securities.

Date for the hearing will be fixed later. Interested parties were directed to file their printed briefs during the next 20 days.

The case stems from contentions of Halsey, Stuart & Co., Chicago, and Otis & Co., Cleveland, that some railroad bonds have been sold to "favored" New York bankers regardless of the bids of other investment houses.

The commission refused recently to interfere in the sale of Pennsylvania Railroad bonds to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., New York, after hearings at which counsel for the Cleveland and Chicago firms contended that a better price was offered elsewhere.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

PCA Air Mail Load Spurts

Pennsylvania - Central Airlines carried more pounds of air mail per scheduled departure from the Washington National Airport during the month of August than any other airline, it was announced yesterday by C. M. Knoble, traffic manager.

PCA planes with 12 scheduled departures a day carried a total of 130,811 pounds of vital air mail from the Nation's Capital in August compared with 159,486 pounds carried by another airline with a daily schedule of 22 departures.

One PCA trip alone carried 40,759 pounds of vital air mail during the month. The air-mail load carried by PCA from Washington during August of this year is 48 per cent greater than for August, 1942, Mr. Knoble said, pointing out that his company was maintaining the flow of air mail with less than half of the number of planes operated before the war.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Don Hutson will operate this season without his long-time batterymate, Cecil Isbell, in the Green Bay Packers' line-up, and already there are predictions that Hutson will cease to be dynamite in the Packers' aerial game.

When Hutson agreed to play one more season for the Packers, Coach Curly Lambeau was presuming that he would be able, also, to talk Isbell out of retirement, but he failed. So Hutson is now bereft of the man who used to "lead" him with those long passes so cleverly that Hutson, an end, led all the backs in the league in scoring last season.

POVICH

The Isbell-Hutson passing team was even a greater scoring threat than the Arnold Herber-Hutson combination with the Packers, and its success lay not only in Hutson's native ability to catch a thrown ball but in Isbell's peculiar talents for getting the ball to him. Isbell's ability to anticipate Hutson's elusive maneuvers down the field was almost telepathic.

When it was suggested that Sammy Baugh, who gets top rating over Isbell as a passer, would form even a greater team with Hutson than Isbell, Ray Flaherty, the former Redskin coach, always dissented violently. "It wouldn't work," he used to say. "Baugh wouldn't be as valuable a passing mate for Hutson as Isbell. We've found that out."

Flaherty pointed out that Baugh has been Hutson's batterymate on passes in several All-Star games and that the team never did do anything amazing. "Baugh doesn't know Hutson like Isbell does, that's why it won't work," said Flaherty. "Only Isbell can anticipate which way Hutson is going to turn, and any other passer is at a disadvantage."

Jimmy Conzelman, long-time coach of the Chicago Cardinals, paid tribute to Hutson last year by declaring "he's the only football player I ever had to put three men against. Trying to cover him with two men was useless. He was a cinch to give them both the slip."

To Hutson, Conzelman ascribed a talent which he called "the third fake," declaring Hutson was the only man capable of it. "The ordinary pass-catching end has two fakes, one to the left and one to the right, or vice versa, but that Hutson gives it that extra twist-back in the original direction and the first thing you know he's loose and is catching the ball. The only way to stop Hutson is to rush the passer."

His pass-catching alone doesn't score touchdowns for Hutson, however. He has another talent, the ability to go places with the ball after he catches it. At the instant he has possession of a ball, a transformation is effected by Hutson. He ceases to be an end and becomes a halfback, but a good one. He runs as if he belongs in somebody's backfield.

There's great doubt that football ever produced a fellow who could catch a football with the same cleverness as Hutson. He wasn't always aiming to take a pass to a touchdown. In a pinch he was content with a long gain, drawing his defenders out of the path of the pitch and then turning suddenly, dropping on his knees and gathering the ball in. The ball was dead on the spot, of course, but the gain was made.

In his pass-catching, Hutson more nearly resembles a good baseball outfielder than anything else. He is adept at the shoestring catches as well as the leaping, one-hand grabs, and his sense of timing must be wonderful. A couple of years ago against the Redskins, Hutson was apparently covered in the end zone and there was apparently no chance for him to catch up with a pass thrown into the corner by Isbell, but he got to it somehow, one step before racing out of bounds, for a touchdown.

This season with the Packers, Hutson will be working chiefly with Tony Canadeo, who was Isbell's understudy last season, and Andy Uram, the old Minnesota back. Neither of them is as familiar as Isbell with Hutson's slip-giving maneuvers down field. It would seem as though a lot of Packer passes are going to hit the ground this season, because Hutson, despite his talents, can't catch the ball that isn't there.

The son of an umpire doesn't get any immunity, it seems, when an umpire's rabbit ears pick up some uncomplimentary remarks from the dugout. Anyway, in the first game of Sunday's double-header at Griffith Stadium, Umpire Charley Berry suddenly whirled from his position at second base and ordered Yankee Catcher Ken Sears off the bench. Sears is the son of National League Umpire Ziggy Sears.

To the crowd of 32,500 in the stadium, it might have been remarkable that Umpire Berry, standing near second base, could (1) hear and (2) identify his heckler on the Yankee bench, but Jimmy Dykes would understand. It recalled Dykes' immortal crack: "I always did say the umpires in this league can hear better than they can see."

Nats Still Can Win Pennant—If the Yankees Collapse

The Nats' stubbornness in winning nine games in a row is making the pennant slightly elusive for the Yankees, but an almost complete collapse by the New York club is required before Washington could get into the World Series.

The Yankees still hold a nine-game lead with only 14 games to play and the figure "five" is now their pennant-winning combination. Any number of Yankee victories and Washington defeats totaling five between now and the end of the season would give the pennant to the Yanks.

To draw the picture a bit finer, the Nats could win the pennant only by winning all 12 of their remaining games during a period when the Yankees were losing 11 and winning only three. If the Yankees win as many as four of their remaining 14 games, they will get a tie for the pennant even if the Nats stretch their current nine-game winning streak to 21 straight.

The standings as of today:

| | W. | L. | GB. | GP |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| New York | 88 | 52 | .. | 14 |
| Washington | 80 | 62 | 9 | 12 |
| Cleveland | 76 | 64 | 12 | 13 |

One more defeat for Washington would enable the Yankees to lose 10 of their remaining 14 and still win the pennant. Two defeats for the Nats would permit the Yankees to lose 11 of their remaining 14 and still win. If the Nats should lose as many as three of their remaining 12, then the Yanks could win the pennant by taking only two of their last 14 games.

The remaining schedule, however, favors the Nats slightly. Whereas the Yankees have eight games remaining (four each) with the Indians and Tigers, the Nats have only five games with those two first-division clubs.

The battle for second place presents a prettier picture for the Nats. With their three-game lead over the the third-place Indians, the Nats can secure second place by playing .500 ball the rest of the season unless the Indians win eight of their 12 remaining games.

Whereas all of the Indians' 13 remaining games are scheduled on the road, including four in Yankee Stadium, the Nats play all of their reamining games in Griffith Stadium where they have been unbeaten in their last 15 starts.

Washington pitching held the Yankees to a total of five earned runs during the recent three-game series, and Early Wynn clung to his chance of becoming a 20-game winner by recording his seventeenth victory of the year. He will have three more starts before the season closes.

Despite his recent base-stealing spree, George Case finds himself with only a margin of two stolen bases on his challenger, Wally Moses, who is still a threat to deprive Case of his fifth straight stolen-base title. The White Sox have two more games to play than the Nats.

Hart-Dorazio Fight Goes at Uline's Tonight

Soldier Packs Advantage of 25½ Pounds

Battle Is Moved Indoors on Account Of Weather; Rivals Go Back to Work

The 10-round battle between Al Hart, Washington's outstanding heavyweight and Gus Dorazio, the hard-hitting Philadelphian, originally scheduled for Griffith Stadium last night, goes on indoors tonight at the Uline Arena.

Unfavorable weather caused postponement of the match several hours before ringtime and Promoter Goldie Ahearn of the Liberty Athletic Club quickly made arrangements with Mike Uline.

Despite the weather, ticket sales were brisk at the ball park yesterday before the postponement announcement. A record crowd is expected to witness the fight, one of the best heavyweight matches to hit Washington this season. Uline Arena seats 12,000.

Tickets Are Same

The seating arrangements at Uline's will be the same as that of Griffith Stadium and it will not be necessary to exchange tickets already purchased. The ticket sale will be resumed at the Arena at 9 o'clock this morning.

Hart and Dorazio weighed in yesterday, the big soldier tipping the scales at 226 pounds, compared to 200½ for Dorazio. Immediately after the decision was reached delaying the fight, the two fighters went to the Ahearn gymnasium. Dorazio went through six rounds of sparring and trained the equal of four more. Hart also went through a stiff workout last night.

Referee Tells Them

After the weigh-in yesterday, Jimmy Wilson, trainer and representative of Dorazio, and Walter Johnson, Hart's manager, went into a huddle with Eddie LaFond, the referee, who explained the District's scoring system.

The eight-round semifinal tonight will be between Mayon Padilo of Philadelphia, who weighed in at 140, and Jimmy Morrison of Newark, 143. These outstanding five-round bouts round out the show which begins at 8:30.

Redskins Buy Ends Lapka And Gibson

Cards and Dodgers Sell Experienced Wingmen; Ray Ruett Released; 2 Others Go

Introductions and farewells were in order again yesterday on the Redskin squad as the outright purchase of two ends, Joe Gibson from the Brooklyn Dodgers and Ted Lapka of the Chicago Cardinals, was announced, plus the release of Ray Reutt, the only V. M. I. product in the pro league.

The 'Skins have placed two other players on the waiver list, both newcomers, and if a trade cannot be arranged they will be released. The squad now stands at 29, one above the maximum which must be in effect October 10, the first league game.

Gibson played a full season last year with the Cleveland Rams and went to the Dodgers when the Ram players were scattered among the other teams in the league when Cleveland disbanded for the duration.

From Tulsa U.

A big fellow of 6-feet-3 and 210 pounds, Gibson played college ball at Tulsa University. The Redskins were interested in him early in the season, but the Dodgers said no. The sale was completed yesterday, however, when the Dodgers also sent Floyd Rhea, rookie halfback from Oregon, to the Cardinals and released Dick McElwee, halfback from West Virginia. Gibson played almost the entire game here last year.

Lapka, a rookie who was a college standout with St. Ambrose, Iowa, was one of the Cardinals' top choices in the draft. He is 6-feet-1 and weighs 195 pounds. The Redskins were interested in Lapka on the basis of glowing reports from scouts in the Midwest.

Strangely enough the Dodgers and Cardinals, who figure to be the weakest teams in the Eastern and Western divisions, are both better fortified at end than the Redskins.

Reutt was the seventeenth player to leave the Redskin squad since the start of the training season in San Diego in July. Reutt sold himself to the Redskin bosses for a try-out, left the squad in Chicago to confer with his Norfolk, Va., draft board and rejoined the team in Washington.

In Scrimmage

Reutt did not play in any of the exhibition games and received his first real tryout Saturday in the Navy scrimmage. "I'd been hanging around here for three weeks, afraid to send for my clothes because I was afraid I might be cut from the squad." Reutt said yesterday, "but after the Navy scrimmage I thought I was in and wired my mother to send all my belongings here. You could have knocked me over with a feather when they told me I was released."

Vic Carroll, who was traded to the New York Giants last week, left yesterday with Tuffy Leemans to join his new mates in Gotham.

The 'Skins worked lightly yesterday at College Park as the scrimmage with Navy Saturday was a rough one. George Smith was out with a nasty cut under his eye and Willie Wilkin's leg was so sore from a pulled muscle he could hardly walk and was forced to take leave of his job as physical instructor at Georgetown. He may be ready for the Cardinals in the Buffalo exhibition game Sunday.

No Football at Georgetown, But 9 Coaches are Busy

Physical Training for 1250 Army Men Keeping Everybody on Toes at Hilltop

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

For the first time in 44 years, the Georgetown University athletic office is not concerned about the opening football game with the last Saturday in September coming up, but the physical welfare of 1250 members of the Army Specialized Training Division and 210 students is keeping a nine-man staff busy through a 12-hour day.

Joe Gardner, director of athletics at the Hilltop last year and director of physical education in the absence of a competitive intercollegiate program this year, was forced to add four new men last week to give the Army trainees and students the proper instruction.

Georgetown is no longer a screening unit for the Army trainees but houses 850 "permanent" enlisted men in engineering and other departments for three 12-week periods and 400 trainees in foreign area languages for two 12-week periods, and when they move out new units move in.

Six Hours Weekly

The Army trainees take six hours of physical training a week, the students three hours, but in addition the instructors remain after classes until 8 o'clock each evening through the week to assist in the intramural sports of boxing and basketball, which last week supplanted baseball.

The physical training program at the Hilltop is divided into five sections — combatives, including wrestling, rough and tumble; boxing, competitive games, military track, and the obstacle and cross-country courses.

If Platoon A is on combatives for the first week of the 12-week period they switch to boxing the second and alternate each week so that in a 12-week period they get three weeks of three of the different classifications and two of the other three.

Gardner and Bill Hutzel, the former physical instructor at George Washington and Maryland, direct the obstacle course and cross-country classes and take daily turns around the courses with the soldiers and students.

Wilkin Happy

Willie Wilkin, the Redskin tackle who was added to the staff last week, and who loves it, works the combative sports with Gus Welch, who also coaches at Georgetown Prep. John Shields, a Georgetown alumnus and Marty Gallagher, the former heavyweight boxer, handle the boxing class.

Vince McNally, who played football at Notre Dame and coached at Villanova, works with Redskin George Smith on competitive games, naturally the most popular phase of the program, and Smith and George Becker, a Hoya graduate and Gardner's assistant, direct the military attack, which includes 100-yard dash from a prone start, hurdles, broad jumps, etc.

The instructors have the students two mornings a week from 9 to 11, and have the Army classes, 11 to 1, 1 to 3 and 3 to 5, and then assist with the intramural program. They double up, taking each other's classes to catch a bite of lunch. Wilkin and Smith, due to Redskin

Man Who Threw First Curve and Proved It Dies

By the Associated Press

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 20.—John Arthur Williams, 87, one of baseball's first pitchers to throw a curve and prove that it was no optical illusion, died today.

A battery mate of Connie Mack when the venerable manager of the Philadelphia Athletics played in his native East Brookfield, Williams demonstrated his "hook" at one time to doubting Amherst College professors.

Williams twirled for Lancaster, Pa., in the old Eastern League and also for Richmond, Va., and Fall River, Mass., in other leagues.

He received his training from Arthur Cummings, former Brooklyn star, who is generally credited with being the first man to make a ball break sharply from a straight course.

Carnegie Coaching Job to Skladany

Pittsburgh, Sept. 20 (AP).—Joseph Peter (Juggsy) Skladany, one of the University of Pittsburgh's' football greats a decade ago, today formally was named head grid coach at Carnegie Tech, replacing Dr. Eddie Baker, now in the Naval Reserves. Skladany, who also holds down a job in a war plant, has been working with the Skibos since the first of the month.

Oregon Quits Football; Only 16 on Squad

By the Associated Press

Eugene, Ore., Sept 20.—The University of Oregon announced last night it was suspending football from the 1943 sports program. Oregon thus became the third member of the Pacific Coast Conference to drop football this season. Montana and Stanford were the other two.

The school's athletic board said in a statement that while Oregon could field a team this season it did not feel the squad would be able to uphold standards of the past. Football will be resumed at Oregon as soon as conditions permit, the board added.

The school's entire athletic staff will be loaned to the physical education department to assist in its physical fitness program for the more than 1000 Army trainees now on the campus.

Only 16 men turned out for football last week.

Howe Entry First, Third in Three-Way Photo Finish

Cassis Wins, True North Runs Third

Rank Outsider, Tellmenow, Place Horse With Threat Of Complete Upset

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Sept. 20—In a three-way photo battle that brought 18,843 fans to their feet, Cassis and True North, a favored entry from the Howe Stable, accounted for first and third positions in the thirtieth Fall Highweight Handicap as an 18-day meeting was inaugurated here this afternoon. Sandwiched between the Howe horses was H. P. Headley's Tellmenow, rank outsider of the dozen starters at odds of 54 to 1.

Ted Atkinson, idol of the New York jockey colony, drove Cassis up on the outside to grab the $6725 first award in the last stride. It was Atkinson's seconl score on the card, he having guided C. V. Whitney's Boojiana to victory over some of the top young fillies earlier on the card.

Cassis and True North, saddled by Preston Burch, returned $8.30 straight, $4.80 place and $5.40 show, while Tellmenow, which had won a handicap at Washington Park before shipping here, returned $28.80 for place.

With Signator scratched, Cassis, under 126 pounds, carried the heaviest burden, ithough the filly Cherrydale, at 123, was equal high weight by the scale. Cassis ran 6 furlongs of the Widener straightaway in 1:11 1-5.

This was the first of 14 stakes scheduled at the 18-day meeting, one which is expected to clarify titular aspirations in several divisions and which will be highlighted by War Bond Day October 2, when the rich Futurity will be the big attraction.

After a good start, the speedy but not always reliable True North assumed a narrow lead over Tellmenow, Ringmenow and New Moon were close by for a quarter mile, then dropped out of it as Cassis moved after the locked leaders. It was a thriller all the way, with the surprising 3-year-old Tellmenow, under her mere 109 pounds, barely failing to cause a major upset. Vain Prince was only a half-length out of third position.

Duke, R. U. Open Season Saturday

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Sept. 20.—Two football teams which are generously flavored with the Navy's V-12 trainees—Duke and the University of Richmond—will kick the lid off the Southern Conference pigskin kettle at Durham, N. C., Saturday.

The victor undoubtedly will have cleared one of the toughest hurdles of the conference championship.

Duke, particularly, demonstrated last week that the Blue Devils are bubbling over with football power. Coach Eddie Cameron's boys ran roughshod over what was supposed to be a pretty fancy bunch of Camp Le-Jeune Marines, consisting of former university stars and professionals. Duke just won 40-0, that's all.

Richmond disposed of the Richmond Army Air Base, 45-0, thank to the backfield fancy work of a couple of fellows from last year's champion William and Mary eleven—Bob Longacre and Jackie Freeman. Longacre ran circles around the Thunderbirds, scoring three touchdowns, while Freeman's long, spiraling punts kept the Air Base with its back to the wall most of the game.

One other game, however, will come in for its share of attention in Southern Conference circles even if it isn't a family affair. North Carolina's Tarheels, who also have a liberal sprinkling of Navy players, journey to Georgia Tech.

Coach Tom (don't-mistake-him-for-one-of-the-players) Young is very anxious to send the Tarheels against the Tornado at Atlanta. He was a halfback for the Carolina team in 1927 that lost a 13-0 thriller to Tech after the Tarheels were stopped twice just inches from the pay window.

Virginia Military Institute, with its lightest and youngest squad in half a century, invades Philadelphia to play Temple and hopes to gain revenge for the 7-0 licking the Keydets suffered there last year. The game is scheduled Friday night.

Other games, all nonconference contests, will find Curtis Bay Coast Guard (Baltimore) at the University of Maryland, Wake Forest at Camp Davis, apprentice school at North Carolina State (night), Presbyterian at Clemson and Newberry at South Carolina.

Two Matches Added to Mat Card at Arena

Two more matches have been added to tomorrow night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena, featuring the two sluggers, Babe Sharkey, the Texas Terror, and Cowboy Luttrell, also of Texas.

One involves Johnny Long, the Baltimore shipyard worker, against Jim Stefano, Philadelphia shipyard worker.

The Blue Streak, a masked grappler, will engage Dick Lever of Salt Lake City in the semiwindup—first meting between these behemoths.

One of the fastest bouts of the night may evolve from the clash between Michele Leone, the Boston Italian, and Tom Mahoney of Philadelphia.

Smith to Pitch For Kavakos in Softball Battle

Cannonball Jack Smith, who pitched two heart-breaking games for Garvin's Grill in the softball World Series at Detroit last week, will take the mound for Kavakos Grill against the Mount Rainier Recreation Center at the District of Columbia Softball Stadium tonight.

Tommy Dobyns will pitch for Mount Rainier in what may be the finals of the invitational tournament, for if the Recreation Center wins it will take the championship. A playoff will be necessary in the event Kavakos wins. Smith and Dobyns engaged in a two-hit-apiece pitching duel in the last Kavakos-Mount Rainier game, which Mount Rainier won on two Kavakos errors in the seventh.

Smith did yeoman duty for Garvin's at Detroit, allowing only three hits in the 14 innings he pitched, but his teammates failed to score

Garner Gets Williams as Next Foe

Holman Williams, Chicago colored middleweight, was signed yesterday to meet John Garner, holder of the D. C. Middleweight and light-heavyweight boxing titles, in the feature 10-round match next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

The bout officially will usher in the fall season at Turner's infoor arena.

Williams, away from his local fistic wars since 1941, was given a $1,000 guarantee or a privilege of 25 per cent, which guarantee, Turner said, is the largest in the history of the Arena.

Williams got the call to meet Garner when all efforts to get Jake LaMotta, outstanding Bronx battler, failed.

This will be Williams' fourth match here. He beat Wild Bill McDowell and Jimmy Leto, but lost a close decision to Izzy Jannazzo. But his record is studded with victories—Cocoa Kid (three), Jose Basora, Charlie Burley, Kid Tunero, Ernest (Cat) Robinson, Paulie Walker, Gene Buffalo, Jannazzo, Vince Pimpinelli, Steve Mamakos, Saverio Turiello and Lloyd Marshall.

Garner, stablemate of Al Hart, the heavyweight, has won 14 straight and is unbeaten. He scored his fourteenth at the expense of Steve Mamakos, winning the light-heavy title at the ball park when the Greek reinjured his right leg.

Mort Cooper, of Cardinals, and Spud Chandler, of Yanks, Have Never Won Or Finished a Game in Classic

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 20.—The day of great names on the mound in the World Series is temporarily past and the St. Louis Cardinals' clash with the New York Yankees next month will be a struggle between two uncertain pitching staffs.

COOPER

If Spud Chandler faces Mort Cooper in the opening game, as expected, both teams will be banking on hurlers who have never won and never finished in two previous starting chances in the annual classic.

A gerat deal has been said and written about the uncertainties of Cooper in World Series competition. He has won 20 and lost 8 this year, pitched 23 complete games and 6 shutouts, and still there is a question about the propriety of Manager Bill Southworth leading off with him against the Yanks.

This is because he was knocked out twice by New York in last year's series and because he also has failed twice against the American League in the midsummer all-star games.

But many of Cooper's critics have overlooked the fact that Chandler has lost the only two series tussles he has started. In 1941 against Brooklyn he allowed only one hit for four innings, but then wore himself out running the bases, trying to get from first to third on a single. In the fifth he issued two walks and three hits for two runs and in the sixth was derricked with two on and none out.

Last year in the third game against the Cards he allowed only three hits in eight innings before being lifted for a pinch batter, but a walk and one hit was all the racing Redbirds needed to score and Lefty Ernie White shut out the Yanks.

This year Chandler has won 19 and lost 4, pitched 19 complete games and 5 shutouts to establish himself as the leading hurler in the American League. Yet he still must prove himself in the World Series, just as Cooper must.

Chandler is a certain starter in the first game, Cooper is the logical choice for the Cardinals. If he loses, the Cards are no worse off than they were at the same point last year.

The Cardinals will have only eight pitchers available for the series compared with an even dozen for the Yanks, and of the St. Louis staff, two have sore arms—White and Harry Gumbert—and three are rookies—Alpha Brazle, Harry Brecheen and George Munger.

At first glance this would appear to impose a tremendous handicap on the Redbirds, but it works out to be a small one if any. The series schedule is such this year that three starting pitchers could work the entire show. Moreover, three of the most effective members of Southworth's set are lefthanders and the Yankees have had many bad days against southpaws this season.

Back of Cooper the Cardinals undoubtedly will choose among their lefties, Max Lanier, Brazle and Brecheen for the other games. Brazle was brought up from Sacramento in mid-July after pitching 40 consecutive scoreless innings in the Coast League and since entering the National League has won seven and lost one while pitching seven complete games and one shutout.

Remembering Johnny Beazley's two triumphs last year should make it possible for Southworth to choose a rookie starter without hesitation.

After Chandler, Joe McCarthy's obvious choice is big Ernie Bonham, who won 21 games last season but failed in the series and who has been an in-and-outer this year with a record of 13-8. The other assignments lie between Hank Borowy, 12-9, and Rookie Charley Wensloff, 12-10.

At times the Yankees have seemed to have the best pitching staff in baseball, but their advantage over the Cardinals now does not seem formidable.

200-Pounder Was Star in Orange Bowl

Whelchel Names His Tentative Line-up for Pre-Flight; Work With Bainbridge

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Sept. 20.—Navy's Coach John E. (Billick) Whelchel wlecomed a new player and announced the Tars' tentative line-up for their game with the N. C. Pre-Flight here next Saturday as the Middies worked hard today in preparation for their season opener.

Bob Jenkins, 200-pound fullback who played with Alabama against Boston College in the Orange Bowl game last year, reported for Tar football practice today.

Jenkins was a substitute fullback for Alabama and got in the game against Boston College. He had a good day and contributed to Alabama's 37-to-21 win over the Boston team.

Martin at Half

Big Jack Martin will fill the center slot, while the right side of the line will see Ben Chase, guard; Walt Schwartz, tackle, and Bill Strong at end.

Recovering From Drill

While the Tars were recovering from a practice scrimmage Saturday with the Washington Redskins and were preparing for a similar practice tomorrow with a squad from Bainbridge.

Terming the practice scrimmages "good experience" for his team and a good way of showing up their rough spots, Billick declined any forecast in any way on the outcome of Saturday's game with Pre-Flight, a Navy school.

Coaches Busy With Trainees At Georgetown

practices in the morning, are on a part-time basis.

Yesterday the classes were put through the physical efficiency tests, the minimum requirements for which are: push-ups, 18; squat jumps, 32; sit-ups, 33; pull-ups, 6; 100 yards pick-a-back in 26 seconds; burpee, 10, and 300-yard run, 48 seconds.

Take the Test

At the end of the second week, which was yesterday for the new class, they take the test and again at the end of the twelfth week to show the improvement. They practice during required 25 minutes of calisthenics daily in addition to the regular classes.

During the summer months swimming supplanted the military track as Gardner found 35 per cent of the classes could not swim a stroke, but almost every soldier passed the swimming test at the end of the period.

Of the class which recently moved out of Georgetown the improvement in the physical efficiency test was completely satisfactory to the Army officers who checked the carefully kept charts of the trainees.

In the pick-ups, the trainees averaged 28 at the end of 12 weeks compared to 14 at the end of the second. In squat jumps the average bounded from 31 to 45, in sit-ups 24 to 36, in chinning 4 to 6. The trainees cut an average of two seconds off the time carrying a man 100 yards and almost a second off the 300-yard run.

He Will Learn

The average of course includes some boys who have no aptitude for the physical tests. Yesterday one trainee could not force himself off the ground in the push-ups. In the competitive games last week a well-built youth admitted he had never taken part in any form of athletics in his life. The program does the most for this type youngster.

Although the Army has banned competitive sports for its trainees, Gardner hopes to schedule informal basketball games with Maryland and other local schools to give the boys an added incentive from a competitive angle. Gardner and his staff try to set a goal in each phase of the training to make the boys reach a maximum pace.

Football at the Hilltop was known to be impossible since last winter. Gardner and Father John J. Kehoe have canceled the basketball schedule and all other sports are definitely out for the duration.

But in their respective roles, strange to both, Father Kehoe and Gardner are satisfying their superiors with a physical program comparable to any college in the Nation.

Their First Meeting

Penn State's Nittany Lions will meet a University of North Carolina football team for the first time this fall. The game will be played at Chapel Hill October 2.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

MEMBERS of the Senate and House Military Affairs Committees are lodging strong protests over the impending transfer of Gen. George Marshall from Chief of Staff to Allied Commander in Chief for the Second Front in Western Europe.

They feel such a move will put Marshall out of the picture as far as the Burma, Italian and South Pacific campaigns are concerned. For when he loses the key post of Chief of Staff and becomes Commander in Chief in western Europe, he will be in charge of only that one operation, cannot supervise the entire American Army on all fronts.

Friends of General Marshall are none too happy over his proposed transfer. Senatorial friends attribute the shift to the British, who are reported to have had some stiff altercations with Marshall over a Western Front.

General Marshall long has thought that the quickest way to Berlin was across the English Channel, while Churchill has publicly favored the "soft underbelly" approach via North Africa and Italy.

Senators and Congressmen who oppose General Marshall's transfer are among those who have supported Roosevelt's war and foreign policies most vigorously and believe they have a right to be heard now. If they fail to make an impression on Secretary Stimson they may introduce legislation to make Marshall Chief of the Armies, a title still nominally held by Pershing, and which would make Marshall supreme over every other American officer.

Quezon on the Job

It's bad news for the Japs that President Quezon of the Philippines is back in Washington. They knew—though it was not generally realized in Washington—that Quezon had suffered a relapse of his old illness, tuberculosis, which has plagued him off and on for twenty years.

Quezon was a well man at the time of Pearl Harbor. But confinement in the dampness of Corregidor, during the Jap attack, brought the illness back again. That was one reason MacArthur urged him to return to the United States in a submarine. When he came to Washington, Quezon was advised to take things easy. Instead, he rushed into the official activities of Philippine Commonwealth affairs, not sparing himself.

His physicians advised him not to remain in Washington during the summer of 1942, nor last winter. But he remained nevertheless. Result was that last spring he suffered a further relapse.

Specialists were summoned, and Quezon was given the stern advice that he would have to get out of the humid climate of Washington immediately, if he wanted to live. Yielding to pressure, he went to Saranac, N. Y., and submitted himself to a rigid discipline during most of the past summer.

Quezon led the life of an invalid, sitting in the sunshine in a wheel chair, listening to the radio, or to his nurses as they read to him. Result of this regime was that the tuberculosis was arrested, and Quezon gained 12 pounds.

When the Japs heard of his relapse, they were ready to say to the people of the Philippines, where Quezon is still highly popular, "Look, this is the skeleton you pin your hopes to."

But today, Quezon is back on his feet and back at his desk, still hoping to realize his one great ambition, to see United States and Philippine forces march into Manila.

Baldwin Wants to Know

WHEN JIM LeCRON resigned from the Rockefeller office with a blast at the State Department, he received a telephone call from his old friend, Calvin B. Baldwin, who on the same day had been appointed by the State Deprtment as economic boss for Italy. Both men were Henry Wallace proteges and long-time friends.

"What do you mean," said Baldwin, "by criticizing my State Deprtment!"

"I hope you can make the wheels go 'round, Beany," replied LeCron.

This proved to be an ill omen of the grief to which Baldwin fell heir. He is being urged to go overseas promptly, but declines to budge until the question of authority is straightened out. Otherwise he would find in his overseas base the same confusion which exists in Washington.

Although Baldwin is supposed to be the chief, no less than seven agencies have their fingers in his pie. Including the State Department, they are Lend-Lease, OEW, Treasury, War, Navy and the Lehman office (Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation).

Baldwin wants an answer to the simple question of whether he is to direct American economic activities in Italy, or merely to coordinate the activities of others. If he is to be merely a coordinator, he will get into as much confusion in Italy as State Department's Robert Murphy did in North Africa. Furthermore, United States agencies would be in a weakened condition in dealing with the British, who have sense enough to unify their overseas operations.

Steuart Defense Assails OPA Figures, Other Oil Dealers

L. P. Steuart & Bro., Inc., concluded its defense yesterday against OPA charges of 227 violations of fuel oil distribution regulations, after Curtis P. Steuart, vice president of the firm, testified that other dealers here were short of oil last winter because they failed to expend money for facilities advised by the Petroleum Administrator for War.

"We were able to supply every consumer who had coupons because we built storage facilities, a large railroad siding, as PAW advocated, brought oil in early, and shipped in more oil than gasoline," Steuart said.

Upon questioning by his attorney, Renah Camalier, Steuart said that other dealers in this area sacrificed fuel oil shipments for shipments of gasoline. He said that other dealers here shipped in five times as much gasoline as oil and that this was one of the reasons for the fuel oil shortage.

Camalier attacked all charges brought by OPA. The next step is the submission of briefs by opposing counsel to Clifford Snider, OPA hearing commissioner. Oral argument is to be held sometime between October 4 and 21.

The charge that the Steuart firm was short some 140,000-gallon equivalent in coupons was refuted by an accountant who said that a recount of the coupons showed that OPA erred in 98 out of 100 cases, so far as Steuart was concerned. The accountant, Raymond M. Florance, OPA, said that a check of 100 out of the 212 cases counted by the OPA revealed that OPA was short some 70,000 gallons in Steuart's case.

Earlier testimony showed that the OPA count was conducted by seven women clerks, none of whom had statistical training.

Countering the charge that Steuart's facilities are unnecessary to adequate fuel distribution for the coming heating season, testimony was introduced that while other dealers here obtained 2,988,000 gallons of fuel oil here from Steuart, the firm OPA accuses was never out of oil. Steuart said his firm had a storage capacity of eight million gallons and sold 29 million gallons of oil last winter.

Other witnesses were called to show that the city would have suffered had it not been for Steuart. Among them were school and hospital officials, fuel oil dealers, and a representative of the 3000 tenants at Brentwood Village.

Whiskey prices in Washington

There is a nation-wide shortage of whiskey.

The whiskey now on hand is in no sense a "reserve."

Whiskey is aged for years before it is bottled and marketed and the present supply was intended for sale in '43, '44, '45, '46 and later. And now this supply must be stretched through 1947 and 1948 . . . because distilleries are now making only alcohol for war.

That's why there isn't enough whiskey available to meet the public demand.

Yet since our plants stopped distilling whiskey last year there has been no change in the official prices of Hiram Walker brands except for the new federal excise tax in 1942 and the OPA adjustments in 1943.

The official OPA prices in this city are as follows:

Canadian Club
Blended Canadian Whiskey 90.4 proof. 6 years old
$4.50 4/5 QUART $2.83 PINT
OFFICIAL OPA PRICES

Signet
Bottled in Bond Rye Whiskey. 100 proof
$3.27 4/5 QUART $2.07 PINT

IMPERIAL
Blended Whiskey, 86 proof 70% grain neutral spirits
$2.75 4/5 QUART $1.73 PINT
OFFICIAL OPA PRICES.

TEN HIGH Rye
Straight Rye Whiskey 86 proof
This whiskey is 4 years old
$2.47 4/5 QUART $1.57 PINT
OFFICIAL OPA PRICES

There will be times when your dealer cannot furnish the brand you request. But in fairness to him, please be patient and remember that the whiskey shortage is real . . . due to the war work of the distilleries.

"He's taking no chances on having someone joggle his Whiskey Sour made with Calvert Reserve"

Who wouldn't zealously guard every precious drop of his Whiskey Sour, once he'd discovered how delectably Calvert Reserve's superb "soft" flavor blends with—never overpowers—the other ingredients! And if it isn't joggling your memory too much, may we remind you that every ounce of Calvert Reserve now comes from costly, irrepiaceable stocks.* Small wonder it's known today as . . . "the choicest whiskey you can drink or serve"!

*Calvert, like every other distiller, is distilling only war alcohol.

Another Lincoln?

Wendell Willkie is Hoosier, farmer, business executive, world traveler, author, defeated candidate and "leader of the opposition party." Is he also the man to "bind up the nation's wounds" and achieve a "just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations" as next President of the United States?

AMERICA and her allies stand today in much the position of the North at Lincoln's second inaugural.

Victory is in sight, and while no one can say when the war's end will come, we can foresee as Lincoln did the great need that will follow it.

We know, as he knew, that the first job was to win the war – "to finish the work we are in," as he put it in his second inaugural address.

We can see also that, after this, comes the same need he defined in that same talk to his countrymen – "to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan – to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

The problems to be faced by our next President will not be merely the military and naval problems of winning the war.

They will be the even more difficult problems of winning the peace – of restoring domestic and world-wide economy – of uniting many factions on both nation-wide and world-wide scale – of healing the wounds of depression-born class prejudice – of putting a great nation back in smooth running order again in both its domestic and its foreign affairs.

Answering questions put to him by LOOK, Wendell Willkie has expressed himself on the most pressing problems to be faced by the country in the next four or five years.

He has outlined his idea of a liberal Republican platform, stated his belief as to what is the most important matter before the American public today.

All that is included in the October 5th issue of LOOK.

With it are frank estimates of Willkie by shrewd newspaper correspondents of leading rank. There is a full picture biography covering Willkie's boyhood, his Army service, the campaign in which he was elected "President of 45% of the people," and his world-girdling travels since.

Does all this mark Wendell Willkie as a "second Lincoln" capable of leading us through the critical postwar period?

Are his views the views that can shape the kind of postwar world the American people want?

Read the October 5th issue of LOOK and decide for yourself.

Read it not alone to learn about Wendell Willkie, but for a clear, plain statement of the important issues to be determined in the next Presidential campaign.

Read it to see why the forthcoming conventions of the major political parties will be the most important conventions the country has witnessed in many, many years.

IS THIS THE PEOPLE'S PLATFORM?

Asked what kind of platform the Republican party should offer for 1944, Wendell Willkie names these five matters as "planks" that must be included. Are these the views of the common people of America?

1. MINORITIES. "We must never forget that the essence of freedom is the protection of minorities. We must not protect these rights fitfully, inconsistently and with political purposes, as has the present administration."

2. EFFICIENT ADMINISTRATION. "The more money we spend for government, the less we have for new enterprises and the creating of new opportunities. The entire executive branch of the government, in my opinion, needs a very substantial revision to the end that it may give the people better government for their tax money."

3. FREEDOM OF OPPORTUNITY. "We must have a rebirth of enterprise – real enterprise. We must have competition, invention, expansion, lower rates, lower prices for manufactured goods. Only thus can we create more opportunities, raise the standard of living, and – most important – maintain real jobs for all."

4. EMPLOYMENT INSURANCE. "All forms of social insurance, including protection against unemployment, must be taken out of politics. The exploitation of human fear and misery for political ends is a shocking crime."

5. FOREIGN RELATIONS. "The Republican party must take the leadership in formulating a new foreign policy, by which we and other nations can assure our future safety and promote our mutual interest. The Administration has no such policy to announce; it is all too clearly acting on pure expediency."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Salerno News Kept Employes on Jobs . . .

Last week, during the heart-stopping news from Salerno, the War Production Board had a net loss of only 21 employes. Several workers who had planned to quit stuck to their jobs. Italy fell the week before and more than 200 employes made a mad rush for home, many apparently believing the war was about over. Officials are now convinced beyond any doubt that the actions of their employes are dictated by war news. Meantime, they are considering further decentralization in the hopes of being assured of enough people to man the agency until the war is finally and actually won.

KLUTTZ

At Agriculture, this delightful story is told about a former serious-minded employe who was recently drafted. The young man was doing guard duty for the first time. A figure approached in the dark and he took aim with his rifle and cried: "Halt, who's there."

The figure identified himself as the officer in charge of the guard's company.

Then came a long silence. The guard stood frozen-stiff with his mean-looking rifle aimed at the officer. The officer, naturally, became nervous and sensing the green recruit was uneasy, he tried to make the best of an embarrassing incident by complimenting the guard on his alertness and then suggested he proceed to the next step as he had been taught by none other than the officer himself on that very afternoon.

"I can't remember what to say next," the guard confessed, and then warned, "but you'd better not make a move until I do."

If that long-studied reorganization of Federal agencies dealing in foreign affairs ever comes off, the Agriculture Department is expected to lose its control, through the Commodity Credit Corporation, of foreign food purchases, and the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations is likely to be transferred to Leo Crowley's Office of Economic Warfare. It's reported on excellent authority that Crowley has put in a bid for the foreign food purchases program, and he would finance it through RFC funds. Moreover, it's reported that Crowley would like to control the exports of foodstuffs to make sure that an adequate supply is maintained here. A showdown in the food problem can't be too far off, and it's another question that has been taken to the President for decision.

Washington's horde of Navy and Army officers has a new name: "Paragraph Troopers." . . . The Committee for Economic Development, the quasi-Government agency that has offices in the Commerce Building, is moving some of its employes to New York. . . . FEDERAL HERO: James Cordua, a Wage and Hour junior statistical clerk, is the first Labor Department employe to die in World War II. He joined the Merchant Marine and recently was swept from the deck on his ship during a storm. . . . S. C. Elliott of Cleveland has been judged winner of the 1943 National Federation of Federal Employes' merit award. The coveted medallion goes to the member who has contributed most toward the progress of the union during the past year. President Eward went to Cleveland to present the award.

Signal Corps employes will put on a musical comedy about life in the Pentagon Building. It should be good. Rehearsals will start tonight and the cast will be made up of all War Department employes. The show is called, "Four Hearts in Wartime," and the story is about four New York showgirls who came here for the duration to do clerical work for Uncle Sam in the roomy Pentagon. The original story was written by Herb Leonard, who teamed with Wilbur Motta to write the songs. The musical on the Pentagon has great possibilities. The first showing is scheduled at the Jewish Community Center in December.

The Interior Department is establishing, in effect, a regionalization of the entire department. The move is highly significant and important, especially to the West. First, the Reclamation Service was decentralized among Western States and this will be followed along similar lines by the Bureau of Mines, Geological Survey, Indians and other Interior offices. The West, Interior officials believe, will be the postwar America and the department is preparing to do what it can to develop the area. The latest Interior decentralization was the creation of six field offices to handle the distribution of bituminous coal.

War Shipping Administration is proud of the record that has been made by its recruiting and manning office. The number of merchant vessels has jumped from 1100 to 2100 in the past year, and the office has hired 65,000 men—from 50,000 to 115,000—to man them. The turnover among seamen is only 15 per cent and that's one of the smallest turnovers in any war industry.

'Govt. Girl' Plane Fighting In Burma Area

The Army's "Government Girl" plane was revealed yesterday to be "somewhere in the China-Burma-India theater of operations."

This announcement by the Army Air Forces' public relations branch was the first word of the P-51 Mustang—presented as an outright gift to the Army by more than 157,000 Federal employes—since the plane's dedication on the Ellipse last May 9.

The Army "Government Girl" and a Navy "Government Girl" were purchased from dollar contributions of Federal workers in a months' campaign sponsored by The Washington Post.

Miss Richardy's Idea

The idea originated with Miss Agnes Richardy in a letter to Jerry Kluttz, editor of the Federal Diary.

Both the Army and Navy warplanes, the latter an F4-U Corsair, were christened and presented in a mass ceremony held on the Ellipse, south of the White House, in which high Government dignitaries took part.

President Roosevelt participated by sending a message of congratulations to the 15,000 present and all those who took part in the unprecedented achievement. The planes were christened by Irene Lefcheck and Edith Disney.

This is the first word from the Army "Government Girl," although the Navy Corsair was reported "in the Southwest Pacific combat zone" three weeks ago.

The tough, compact Army Mustang, proven already on many battle fronts, is a single-seater, single-engine, all-metal monoplane of low-wing cantilever type, and carries "heavy armament."

In many instances these craft have been literally shot to pieces in encounters with enemy aircraft and yet able to make a landing.

Army fliers say they are superior to the Nazis' No. 1 fighter plane, the Focke-Wulf, and have on many occasions proven it.

"Fastest of Its Type"

The London Daily Express refers to it as "the fastest of its type in the world."

An Air Force official said that "in flight the Mustang is little more than a blur. It has an Allison 1150-horsepower liquid-cooled engine and is in the 400-mile-per-hour class."

There is a P-51 Mustang on exhibit at the Air Forces' exhibit of the "Back the Attack" show on the Washington Monument Grounds. However, the color is different than the "Government Girl" plane which was camouflaged when it whirred out to meet the enemy last May.

Though rain fell throughout the evening several hundred hardy persons trekked about the grounds inspecting canvas shrouded weapons and other equipment, and visiting the enclosed exhibits which were open to 10 p. m.

Despite slight but annoying drizzles early in the afternoon yesterday, more than 15,000 persons visited the great Army offering. Arena stands, where the main demonstrations are held, were packed by show-time, 2:15 p. m.

The arena audience, damp but enthusiastic, was rewarded, for its hardihood, as the Chemical Warfare Service gave a full scale demonstration of colored identity smoke-bombs.

Trailing uprising pink, yellow and purple smoke behind them they made a bewitching sight against the low-hanging gray overcast.

But, while thousands packed the arena stands, other thousands thronged the tented and roofed exhibits, the Medical Department section attracting the greatest number of visitors, outside the arena.

In a progressive series of exhibition booths the Army Medical Corps took visitors through various stages of handling of battle wounded. Scenes were enacted showing first aid being applied to wounded men in the jungle, their transportation to defensive sector stations and finally to main back-line hospitals. In one booth a grim sense of realism was given by surgeons apparently cutting into the body of an injured man, extracting metal fragments and finally sewing him up again.

On the Home Front

Speaker of the afternoon was District Commissioner Guy Mason, who gave a sober warning in connection with the District's lag in meeting its quota in the Third War Loan drive.

"On the home front we must predicate our activities of the worst and not of the best," Commissioner Mason declared.

"We will then be prepared when the blitzkrieg of the enemy hits us with startling suddenness, and instead of retreating to our trencher or beachheads of smugness and complacency, we will counterattack."

Commissioner Mason charged the District's "fall behind" in its quota subscription schedule to raise $94,000,000 was due "to an attribute almost exclusively American, to let down on success news and to work only when the chips were down."

Newsboys Are Guests

"We may counterattack on the home front by buying war bonds whenever we are asked to do so," he said. "Regardless of the fortunes of the combat forces, the only sacrifice entailed for many of us is not to have a new suit, a fur coat, a trip to the seashore, or, perhaps, some of the desirable things of life. None of us is called upon to give up necessities."

Guests of honor at yesterday's show were five Philadelphia newsboys who have set a war stamp record for the Nation. The five boys sold a combined total of 275,952 10-cent war stamps while on their newspaper routes or calling papers on their various routes.

Show attendance yesterday passed the 1,190,000 mark with eight days left for those who have not yet seen this amazing and dramatic assembly of American war might.

The show will end September 26, a date on which, 25 years ago, the great battle of the Argonne Forest got underway in France, with American troops beating back the last desperate bid of Germany to stave off defeat.

The Army Air Forces Flying Band arrived during the day to play at different points on the show grounds through Wednesday. It is the Patterson Field Band, organized in 1941 and last year rated tops by music critics among the country's dance jazz bands.

Every band member is first an airplane repair mechanic and a musician next and all are, according to Army men, equally efficient at both jobs.

Band in Gay Uniforms

Clad in gold and blue uniforms, the band presents one of the most striking organizational appearances in the spectacle's personnel.

However, for those who have wondered how the swollen streams of supplies are diverted on foreign shores for dispersion to our hard-fighting, fast-moving troops, the corps demonstration should prove educational in the extreme.

Demonstrated will be the gear and machinery used in unloading supply ships that have braved the submarine menaces of ocean wastes and come safely to faraway docksites. Also to be shown are the "Ducks" amphibian trucks which played so important a part in the conquest of Sicily.

A railway shop battalion will work throughout this part of the show, assembling gondola cars and revealing the use of giant loading and unloading cranes.

Earth Borer Shown

One demonstration that attracts interest every day of the spectacle is the Signal Corps' "earth borer," which digs a hole 7 feet deep and 20 inches wide in less than 2 minutes. It is used by the corps for making telephone post-holes and was used extensively in North Africa and Sicily to keep communications paced with the rapid advances of Allied forces.

Also to be seen is a wire throwing truck that can lay a mile of wire in a few minutes in the middle of parked convoys, telephone poles and roadside obstacles. Traveling at 45 miles an our the wire, propelled by a motor, can be thrown in lengths of 70 feet, clear-clearing obstacles 40 feet high. The wire thrower is used in dangerous front-line operations where permanent systems would be endangered.

Brazilian Decorations Given To U. S. Officers by Gen. Dutra

Maj. Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra, Brazilian minister of war, decorated 10 United States Army officers last night with the Order of Military Merit of Brazil, the highest Brazilian military honor bestowed on men of a foreign nation. The ceremony was held at the Brazilian Ambassador's residence, 3000 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff, received the rank of grande official of the Order of Military Merit. The rank of comendador was bestowed on these officers: Maj. Gen. Levin C. Allen, Maj. Gen. Karl Truesdell, Maj. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Brig. Gen. Jeamond D. Dalmer, Brig. Gen. Claude M. Adams.

The rank of official was awarded to Col. W. J. Baird and Lieut. Col. Theodore Babbit. Capt. Vernon Walters and Lieut. Clark D. Borton received the rank of cavalheiro.

In presenting the decorations, General Dutra said:

"It is a great satisfaction for me to reward these officers for their valuable services to the government of Brazil. These great soldiers have distinguished themselves by collaborating with Brazil and bringing two nations—my country and the United States—closer together. The officers selected for the award were among those who have conducted General Dutra during his visit in this country.

Plan for D. C. Bond Planes Approved

District Reaches 51.9% of Quota As Nation Passes Three-Quarter Mark

As the District reached 51.9 per cent of it s94 million dollar quota in the Third War Loan Drive John A. Reilly, chairman of the District War Finance Committee, announced yesterday that a group of carrier-based planes costing a total of $32,600,000 will go into battle with the official seal of the District after the goal is attained.

Reilly disclosed that total bond sales in the District had climbed to $48,800,000 through last Saturday. The total national sales reached $10,745,000,000, Theodore R. Gamble, national director of the drive, announced yesterday. The national goal is 15 billion dollars.

Final Authority Given

Final authority permitting the District to sponsor the fighter planes, the number of which was not announced for security reasons, came yesterday from Secretary of Navy Frank Knox and the Treasury Department.

Reilly explained that purchase of the planes will depend on the District's bond sales to individuals which is expected to raise the necessary $32,600,000 by November 9.

"The knowledge that individuals will help to send planes against the enemy should give a tremendous boost to bond purchases," Reilly said, adding, "it is in this category that we have been lagging so far in the campaign."

The proposed project includes three types of planes—fighters, dive bombers and torpedo bombers—which range in price from $75,000 to $135,000.

Maryland Exceeds Goal

Announcement was made yesterday that Maryland had become the first State to exceed its quota in the Third War Loan Drive. Although the State lagged in the beginning, its purchases had reached 203 million dollars by yesterday. This figure is seven million dollars more than the 196 million dollars quota set for the State by the Treasury Department.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., sent a congratulatory telegram yesterday to Hooper S. Miles, chairman of the Maryland War Finance Committee, commending Maryland as the first state to go over the top in quota in the War Loan Drive.

Although the District has passed the half-way mark of its quota, it is lagging in bond sales as compared with the rest of the Nation, Reilly pointed out. He called on more cooperation from individual purchasers of bonds, explaining that this category of sales is falling below expectations.

More Rallies Planned

Reports from retail stores, where each clerk is pledged to be a buyer and a seller of bonds in obtaining a $200 individual quota, disclosed that additional meetings and rallies are planned to reach the retailers' goal during September.

The week-end purchase of seven million dollars in bonds by the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. was reported and yesterday's largest sale was made when Wilfred H. Blonz, secretary of the American Building Association, handed war bond workers the association's check for one million dollars worth of securities.

Rallies scheduled for today include: Hebrew Sisters Aid Circle at Statler Hotel, 12:30 p. m.; Managers' Section, District of Columbia Life Underwriters' Association, Willard Hotel, 12:15 p. m., and a meeting of the District of Columbia Dental Society at 8 p. m. at the District Medical Society Building, 1718 M st. nw.

Col. Roosevelt Of Marines Here For 2-Day Visit

One of the traveling Roosevelts, Lieut. Col. James Roosevelt of the Marines, arrived in Washington last night for a stay of two days.

Why he was here was "a military secret." He came from Los Angeles aboard an American Air Lines plane.

Asked about his latest mission in Kiska, he revealed that the nearest thing he had seen to a Jap was a dog, "which might have belonged to a Jap; I don't know."

"They have the finest climate in the world there," he explained, smiling. "It changes every five minutes."

Questions as to whether he would be at the White House, Colonel Roosevelt pondered a moment and replied:

"Well, I will if I can find a bed."

Lewis Asked For Full Data On Illinois Trip

By the Associated Press

The Alexandria War Price and Rationing Board, instructed to investigate reports that John L. Lewis violated OPA regulations August 11 by driving to Springfield, Ill., yesterday requested the United Mine Workers' president to furnish "a full and complete itinerary of the trip."

A letter, signed by J. S. Douglas, jr., chief clerk of the board, asked that the information be supplied "at your earliest convenience. . . . in order that all interested parties may be informed and satisfied."

An item in a Decatur (Ill.) newspaper to the effect that Lewis had passed through there on his way to Springfield to see his mother, prompted a number of persons to protest to the Decatur rationing board.

Lives in Alexandria

The case was referred to the Alexandria board, since Lewis has his home there. The local board, until recently under the Richmond district OPA, has been transferred to the Roanoke OPA district, but the Richmond office is completing investigations begun before the transfer.

District OPA officials at Richmond said that if Lewis made the trip for the purpose of visiting his mother he would be guilty of violating the non-essential driving ban (in effect at the time) for that part of the trip to the Virginia border. If the trip was for business purposes, no violation would be involved.

The text of Douglas' letter to Lewis follows:

"You are no doubt aware of the wide publicity that has been given to a recent trip you made by automobile to Springfield, Ill., and vicinity.

"All Should Be Willing"

"Due to this wide publicity, and in fairness to all concerned, the OPA, the public and yourself, I am instructed by the Richmond District OPA to request of you at this time to furnish us at your earliest convenience with a full and complete itinerary of the trip in question in order that all interested parties may be informed and satisfied.

"We are of the opinion that in these trying times, where so much is being denied so many, all should be willing to stand up and be counted.

"Your cooperation will be appreciated."

Miners Back Chief

United Mine Worker officials have explained that Lewis made the trip as a union official for the purpose of visiting a number of mining communities en route, thus keeping in touch with the rank and file of his union's membership. They contended that he visited his mother in Springfield, Ill., as an incidental part of the trip because it was on the way.

William H. Davis Talks to Graphic Arts Association

William Hammatt Davis, chairman of the National War Labor Board, last night addressed the Graphic Arts Association of Washington on the subject of "Postwar Problems in Labor Relations."

This was the 1252d consecutive weekly meeting of the association.

Richard Chamberlin, of Ransdell, Inc., was installed as the new president of the association by Dial H. Elkins, president of Batt, Bates & Co., the retiring president.

Guests of honor included Alvin W. Hall, director, Bureau of Engraving and Printing; Clark R. Long, assistant director, Bureau of Engraving and Printing; John J. Deviny, deputy public printer, United States Government Printing Office; and Louis A. Lopez of the National War Labor Board.

Realtor Finds Woman Dead In His Room

Mrs. Mary Ruhl, 33, of 712 North Monroe st., Arlington, Va., was found dead in a room of the Flanders Hotel, New York City, yesterday by George D. Miller, Washington real estate salesman, who lives at 3401 34th pl. ne., according to an Associated Press report.

MRS. RUHL

New York police said the woman apparently died of natural causes.

After Miller told his account of the affair the New York police said there would be no further questioning of him.

Mrs. Ruhl was former reception clerk at the sales desk of Boss & Phelps, one of the Capital's oldest and largest real estate firms. Miller is sales director of the firm.

Mrs. Ruhl was the wife of a Marine private stationed at a radio school in Texas. She is the sister of Emily Saum of 3435 Brown st. nw., who said last night that Mrs. Ruhl resigned her position at Boss & Phelps in April, Miss Saum said, to take a job at Gilman's Drug Store, 627 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Mrs. Ruhl came here from Woodstock, Va., her sister said, and has been married since 1937. She has no children.

Miller, who has been with Boss & Phelps for approximately 20 years, is a member of the Washington Real Estate Board and is known as an authority on real property values here.

According to Harry K. Boss, senior partner of the firm, Miller left for New York Saturday afternoon to attend the wedding of one of his three sons.

2 D. C. Area Men Are Decorated For Services

Two Washington area men have been decorated for meritorious service in action, it was officially announced yesterday by the War and Navy Departments.

They are Lieut. Cadman V. Padgett, 26, Bethesda, Md., USA, who was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and Lieut. Roger S. C. Wolcott, 26, of 4851 Reservoir rd. nw., USNR awarded the Air Medal.

Lieutenant Padgett, who has been serving with the Army's Eighth Air Forces overseas, had previously received Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal. He was one of the American Eagle Squadron pilots who had tea with Queen Elizabeth and Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose in London in February, 1942. Before entering the service, he had been employed here as a mechanic for the McKee Auto Sales Co.

Lieutenant Wolcott, a Navy pilot and son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger D. Wolcott, was decorated for sinking a Jap submarine in the vicinity of the Solomon Islands. He was born in Soochow China, where his father was associated with the Chinese salt administration and educated in this country at the University of Wisconsin. He enlisted in the Navy in 1940.

William E. Hudson, 70, mining engineer of 2309 Q st. se., died last night on the platform of a New York City subway station after becoming ill on a train, the International News Service reported.

Nurseries Running at Near Capacity

Local Federally sponsored nursery schoools are operating at near capacity until additional equipment and personnel can be obtained, Dorothy Pearse, head of the loocal day care and nursery projects, reported yesterday.

Centers are open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., as previously, and Miss Pearse said youngsters now attending school and kindergarten are being sent for before and after school supervision. Five- and 6-year-olds attending the two-shift kindergartens are with the center at least three-fourths of the day, she said.

Location Unfavorable

Only at the Knox-Hill center, 3000 Knox Hill rd. se., is there any appreciable lack of attendance. This, Miss Pearse said, is because the center is located too far out to be conveniently used by Anacostia children.

Meanwhile, the Children's Bureau yesterday began a survey of facilities for day care of children of women Government employes. The survey is being made at request of the Council of Personnel Administration which claims lack of adequate facilities for such care is causing absenteeism and turnover among these women employes.

For 5-14 Group

The public centers for day care of children 5 to 14 are located at 314 D st. se.; Cooke School, 17th and Euclid sts. nw.; and Knox-Hill; all for white children. Morgan School 18th and V sts. nw., and Smothers School, 44th and Washington place ne., for Negro children.

Nursery care for youngsters 2 to 5 is provided at Truesdell School, 9th and Ingraham sts. nw., and 314 D st. se. for white children and Harrison School, 13th and V sts. nw., and Smothers for Negro children.

OPA Authorizes Laundries to Cut Low-Rate Service

The Office of Price Administration yesterday authorized laundries faced with difficulties in obtaining equipment and supplies to discontinue lower-priced services if the same needs can be filled in the higher-priced services.

The OPA announced laundries must qualify under one of these requirements to discontinue the lower-priced services. That specialized equipment or supplies requisite to the service are not available; that continuation of the service would be in violation of a Government order; that discontinuation would allow the laundry to maintain other services more vital to the community; that other laundries in the community are able to offer the discontinued service in requisite quantity and at no higher prices.

Notices of intention to discontinue a service must be filed with a statement of qualification by the laundries at District OPA offices.

Grade A Recapping Ceiling Set by OPA

The Office of Price Administration yesterday set maximum prices for recapping with Grade A camelback truck and bus tires in sizes smaller than 8.50-20. Reflected in the slightly higher ceilings is the change from Grade C to camelback, authorized by the War Production Board for these smaller tires.

The increase, it was said, will be offset by increased mileage.

Illustrating the price differential, OPA said the cost of recapping a size 7.00-20 bus and truck tire, with conventional tread, will be $11.80 when grade A camelback is used. The Grade C price is $11.25.

Reader Says Disillusioned Wife, Whose Husband Ignores Her Since She Trapped Him Into Marriage, Is Tainted With Common Ail of Adult Infantilism

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "I wanted someone to take care of me." This is the whining explanation given by "Disillusioned," your correspondent of September 15, for having shanghaied a gentlemanly sort of chap into marrying her some months ago. Now that the guy shuns her company, after she goaded him to the altar, she is glumly disillusioned with her situation, and ready to admit that the marriage is a failure,—even from her viewpoint. She would like some suggestions on how to win the man's love and respect. It is late in the day that she got around to realizing the importance of these two ingredients to a good marriage.

This desire "to be taken care of," is an insidious disease that has lingered too long among modern women. It is the disease of adult infantilism. Any mature-age, able-bodied woman who wants to marry in order to be "taken care of" is not qualified to be a wife, mother and homemaker. What she really needs is institutional care,—in a sanitarium with a psychiatrist presiding. She needs expert help in growing up to adult character stature. She needs to learn the A-B-C's of being adult; needs to reorient all her thinking, all her standards of personal worth. She needs stimulating instruction, to induce mental and spiritual growth.

For assuredly she is a "half-way" person. She is a case of arrested development,—an individual who has failed mentally to grasp the fact that nowadays normal grown folks are never "taken care of," unless they are sickly or decrepit with age, or overburdened with the care of young children; or are engaged in making some artistic or humanitarian contribution to society,—which at the moment commands no "market price," and which other altruistic individuals are willing to subsidize. Instead of being allowed to attach herself to some male meal ticket, to the progressive detriment of both, this type of woman should be instructed in the necessity of becoming a contributive citizen in her own right. She should be taught that parasitism is one of the most thoroughly damning conditions a human being can experience. No adult female can yearn to regress to the status of protected child,—as "Disillusioned" evidently does,—without being to some degree a psychologically sick woman.

Day of Respected Clinging Vine Is Gone

She tells us that she is not by nature domestic; but that she had "got tired of having to go out to a regular job every morning." Well, we all get tired of our regular job at times! But if we have any understanding of what constitutes being adult, we don't make that an excuse for trying to "dead-head" our way through life. We face the fact that we are getting jaded and we take ourselves in hand to do something constructive about it. We change jobs or go on vacation, or adopt new hobbies; or ask the doctor to prescribe a tonic. Or we seek new friends in a different environment. Or perhaps we recognize the need to change our manner of thinking,—and proceed to look for the rewarding values in our work, instead of concentrating entirely on its fatigue aspects (which exist in all forms of labor).

No woman need expect to find even moderate happiness in this life, who is unwilling to shoulder adult responsibilities and take the bitter with the sweet. Nor can she make progress on the spiritual side,—as a woman must, if she is to find and keep, with advancing years, the love and respect of other adults. All women should imprint upon their consciousness the fact that the day of respected parasitism is gone forever. Modern women, and the woman of tomorrow, must be positively useful to society. The time has come when the stupid, clinging, helpless, protection-seeking female is being looked upon with the scorn she deserves. Her place is taken by the alert, sturdy, self-reliant and contributing woman.

Parasitical Man-Hunter Humiliates Her Own Sex

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Disillusioned," published last Wednesday, was read by me with a great deal of interest. It is embarrassing, to say the least, that one of my sex would behave so unworthily. She tells us that she trapped a man into marriage because she was "tired of having to go out to a regular job every day." My married friends tell me that marriage is a 24-hour-a-day job, requiring steady concentration to be a success. For the benefit of "Disillusioned" and other women like her,—i. e., women approaching middle age, who are not pretty and have never been attractive to men,—I would like to state my philosophy of life, which has brought me a fair share of happiness so far; although it is true I am as yet on the sunny side of 30.

I was reared in a small town. Our family had none of the small luxuries that make life enjoyable. I was obliged to leave school at an early age, to go to work. However, I continued my education through tutoring provided by an instructor who was interested in my welfare, because of my previous school record. Thus, between the ages of 18 to 21, when all my friends were enjoying dates and the proverbial pleasures of youth, I was holding a fairly responsible position and spending every spare minute in study. I mention this to explain that I would have had no time for dates, even if I had been asked. But, like "Disillusioned," I seem to have no romantic come-hither for men. Actually, I have never been asked for a date in my life. But I have always had (and still do have) a number of men friends who turn to me, in a brotherly sort of way, for heart-to-heart talks concerning their business and personal affairs. In fact, all my friends,—both men and women (and I have many warm women friends), most of them 5 or 10 years my senior,—habitually consult me regarding their problems.

The Purpose of Life Is to Help Humanity

From the time I was 19 until I was 24, I often wondered why I never had beaux, as other girls did. Since then, I have more or less stopped thinking about it. I have got "me" off my mind. All I ask is opportunity to be of help to others,—and my present job affords that chance. During the past three years, I have been employed in a secretarial capacity by an important person in public life, who is doing a really useful job on a large scale, and who needs all the unselfish assistance that can be enlisted. It is true that credit for my best work goes to my boss;—but this routine of being of real service to him, plus my hobby of helping others with whom I come in contact at the office and in school (I am completing my education at night school), and all my outside friendships, have given me the deep satisfaction of feeling that I am needed by others, which is a satisfaction that all of us crave.

On the other hand, I have not lost sight of the fact that it is perfectly normal for a woman to anticipate the fulfillment of marriage, homemaking and children;—but I don't think it is "normal" for a woman to wage a desperate campaign to achieve this objective If Providence sees fit to give me such blessings, I trust I shall prove worthy of them,—by recognizing marriage as the biggest job a woman can undertake, and doing my level best to make it a success in the eyes of all concerned. But if marriage should be denied me, I can be perfectly happy in my present role. I feel that the underlying purpose of individual life is to help all humanity, in such ways as one can. And I believe,—and my experience so far would seem to prove,—that by recognizing and serving this purpose, one's life gains steadily in value and significance. Perhaps if "Disillusioned" would try to give to life instead of trying solely to "take" from it, she would find the happiness that has thus far eluded her. Has she forgotten the Scriptural injunction, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you?"

Suit Into Jumper

By Ruth Gregory

Most designers, when confronted with a length of fine herringbone tweed, automatically turn out a trimly tailored suit. But it takes a designer with a distinctly original flare and a dash of daring-do to turn out a suit that becomes a jumper and vice versa.

And why not? When it's a costume as charming and versatile as the one sketched. Maybe it was the mood we were in, but ordinary suits suddenly became very monotonous looking beside this three-piece outfit.

Button the jacket and you have a very smart tweed suit, made even more interesting by what appears to be a self-vest beneath. Take off the jacket and presto! there's a costume complete unto itself—with the unfinished look of a suit skirt and blouse.

A gold-colored wool jersey blouse is shown with both of the two colors this tweed suit comes in—a subtle blue and a wine shade. Very pleasing, too. But if you prefer another shade, that's your privilege, and it can be easily arranged since each part of this ensemble is separately tagged. The handsome one-button jacket is under $17, the halter-jumper under $14, and the blouse under $8.

College girls or young career girls (sizes 10 to 14 only) should find this a perfect suit for a whole flock of reasons. Not the least of which is its "scrambling" possibilities—different blouses with the pinafore and other skirts with the jacket.

The Dreamers

We are the dreamers,
The men and women visionaries and idealists with our heads in the clouds,
Who dare to believe that a world of enduring peace is possible,
Who venture to suggest that every human being should have enough to eat,
Who would be so revolutionary
As to make tomorrow better than today, or even sacrosanct yesterday.
Yes, we are the dreamers, "sentimental, theoretical, impractical,"
But with us marches a glorious company.

II

They were dreamers too—
The saints and the scientists who alike ventured dauntlessly
Into the realms of the unknown;
Jesus of Nazareth, most impractical of men, the world's greatest dreamer;
Saul, stricken blind on the way to Damascus, and thereby influencing the ages;
Joan of Arc, who heard voices and changed history;
James Watt, who visioned an industrial world in the vaporings of a tea-kettle.
Galileo, Newton, Pasteur, Curie—all led by their glimmerings of things not seen but hoped for.

III

Columbus was a dreamer,
And what is more, a theorist, at whom sane, practical men laughed and jeered,
Dreamers too were those on the Mayflower, the Ark and the Dove,
So naive as to believe there was somewhere a better world than their old one,
And those who endured cold, hunger and pestilence at Jamestown
Were sustained in the faith they could build themselves a new tomorrow;
And in 1776 another little group of impetuous dreamers,
Against the advice of many hard-headed, conservative colonial gentry,
Launched a new nation embodying man's boldest dream of democracy.

IV

Out of dreams came our mechanical world of today,
The dreams of Edison, the Wright brothers, Steinmetz;
And from men who are described as "long on faith and short on funds,"
Men who had to battle disbelief, scoffing, official inertia,
Came our newest weapon of war and tool of peace—radar.
Perhaps even you and I would not be here today using these implements of civilization
If some jellyfish "idealist," led by the crudest of promptings,
Had not groped out of its safe and tried slime toward something different and better.

V

The mathematician is a dreamer
When he lets X equal the unknown quantity;
He is a visionary when he believes, nay when he knows, there is a solution to the problem.
Pythagoras had a theory; so did Copernicus;
Leonardo Da Vinci, superman of art and science, was called an inveterate dreamer.
So have been all men and women who have hurled the eternal "No" down the ages
To those who have counseled "Stay put," "Play safe," "Things can never be bettered."

VI

We who dream are immortal
Scoff as you may, you little men with timid, suspicious spirits,
You old and tired men with impotent souls, you limp and cowardly thinkers,
Afraid to leave your dingy fortresses of mind;
Ridicule with your cheap wit, make your crafty appeals to the mob mind,
It does not matter, for even if we fail, we win—tomorrow;
Even though we die, we go on, in our dreams and our visions,
Who remembers the practical and hardheaded people of yesterday?
Only those who belong to the future live; those with faces turned to the past shall be buried.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The temporary or permanent antagonisms between husband and wife often are expressed in subtle ways.

The mother's efforts to woo her child to an unswerving loyalty to her may arise from her distrust of her husband's loyalty. Her determination to stand first makes her overly protective and indulgent and hostile to his less tender treatment of the child.

A husband has ways of showing the trend of his own emotions; overriding the wishes of the mother in the matter of child care may be one of them. Instead of being cooperative he shows himself in stubborn opposition to her.

Traces of both attitudes show up in the behavior of these two, young parents.

"I feel myself to be a conscientious mother," writes Mrs. F. B., "and it worries me because my husband is so indifferent to my wishes.

"The baby is 9 months old and a fine, husky boy. I want to keep him so. My husband plays violently with the boy. He says it will prevent him being a sissy. He tosses him in the air, tries to get him to stand on his hands and makes my hair curl, he is so rough.

"Sometimes the baby screams with delight, sometimes he just cries. I play with him, too, but more gently and he likes that. I tell my husband I don't think this violent play at bedtime is good for our boy but he sleeps well and so my husband won't listen to me. I don't believe in whipping children but my husband thinks you have to beat good behavior into them. How can I make him see my point of view?"

First, by trying to see his. Your husband may be more boisterous but he has the same ideals for the boy as you have and if he is a decent person, he does not want to harm the boy.

When he plays with him, don't stand in silent or articulate disapproval; leave them alone. Unconsciously he may be more violent because you do disapprove. This is his boy, too.

Try to read some good literature on the subject of obedience and punishment, about which modern generations think differently. We rear children for the world in which they are to live and old methods may be suggestive of an older world already past its prime.

Try to see it impersonally instead of as a personal conflict between you and the father. Then the boy will benefit.

Our leaflet, "Obedience and Punishment," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Average Case of Backache Likely to Get Uncertain Care

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

I must confess, as a criticism of my profession, that the average fellow with an average, acute backache in a town of average doctors is not likely to get much of a break in the handling of his case.

Somebody has said that the only person interested in backache is the fellow who has one. There are three kinds of doctors into whose hands he is likely to fall: first, the doctor who gives him some chloroform liniment to rub on and then straps up the back with adhesive tape, no matter what the cause may be. Second, the manipulator who rubs and pounds and wrenches the back, often adding additional injury to the original one, and third, the rarity who really tries to find out what the cause of the trouble is and prescribes treatment accordingly.

Not, you understand, that strapping or manipulation may not be the correct thing, but it is a good idea to find out what exactly is the matter first.

Complicated Structure

The back is a pretty complicated structure. There are first the vertebrae, a succession of bones attached to each other by ligaments and separated by cartilaginous disks. Nearly anything in the way of injury or disease, such as arthritis, might happen to the vertebrae bones alone to cause backache. But then there are a large number of massive muscle groups which move the spinal column around, keep it in line, etc. Anything may throw a strain on them, from high heels to a slumped position at the school desk, and will produce a postural backache.

There are nerves coming out from the spinal cord through apertures between each vertebrae, and these may become inflamed. Then there are organs underneath—the kidneys, which may contain stones to produce backache (although the old conception of Bright's disease appearing as a pain in the back is pure bunk). Then, and this is often forgotten, there is the mental conception of the back. It bears the burdens of life. And some may think their burdens are too heavy and get a psychological backache.

So the task of the diagnostician in studying a case of backache is a formidable one. The backache may be acute, due to a wrench or an injury. Here bracing the back to produce immobilization is possibly indicated. The adhesive strapping may be all right or it may require a plaster cast. Recurrent backaches may be due to posture or muscle inflammation, and here lies often the value of massage, manipulation, or some form of physical therapy.

Other Types

Backache relieved by rest is likely to be due to injury, perhaps even small fractures of the vertebral facets. Backache in the morning, getting better as the day wears on, is usually in the muscles—fibrous deposits or what not. Backache at night is likely to be arthritis of the vertebrae or to protrusion of the disks between them. Constant backache often denotes an infection of some part of the spine.

But these are generalities and should always be checked by X-ray and careful physical examination.

Perhaps no food is better appreciated than hot quick breads. Make the kind that are not only piping hot when served but have lightness, tenderness and crispness.

It isn't a difficult chore to make quick breads for breakfast. Prepare the batter for them first, and they can bake while you are preparing the fruit or fruit juice, and setting the coffee to drip or perk, and perhaps looking to the cereal cooking.

If you will serve such a breakfast as suggested menu which follows, you can be sure that those who eat it can go along to business and be well fortified for the day's work.

MUFFINS

Mix and sift together 2 cups pastry flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, tartrate or phosphate type (use 2 teaspoons combination type), ½ teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons sugar. (Use up to ½ cup sugar to make sweeter muffins.) Beat 1 or 2 eggs until light and add 1 cup milk and 4 tablespoons melted butter. Add to the flour mixture all at once, stirring only enough to dampen flour. Drop by spoonsful in buttered muffin pans until 2-3 full and bake 15 to 20 minutes in hot oven (400 degrees F.). Makes 12 muffins or 24 small tea muffins.

Bacon Muffins—Use bacon fat for shortening and add 3 tablespoons cooked diced bacon.

MEMO TO MISS BROWN

Creative Writing

It has been said that every woman has the material for at least one novel in her own life. That's something we can argue about with our grandchildren, perhaps. But even at our tenderish age, we should have accumulated a good short story's worth or, at the very least, a 50-word essay's worth. Putting words on paper can be a lot of fun and even in rare cases profitable—so let's join the rejection slip club. Courses for those who don't know a trick ending from a secondary plot and who'd like to learn, are numerous and inexpensive, so let's not let our budding genius waste its sweetness on the Washington air.

The Central YWCA at 17th and K sts. nw., offers several practical courses in magazine writing which should give direction to the most wayward talent. There's short story writing, for example, made-to-order for beginners and novices in general. This is a combination of lecture discussions and laboratory in which the student turns out masterpieces which the teacher and class dissect with vigor. The class meets from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m. every Thursday and costs a mere $8 for 15 weeks. If your skill runs to facts and not fiction, try the article writing course, same price, same general organization, on Thursdays from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. (Or you may take both at once, if you really want to go about the thing in a businesslike manner.)

After you've learned the rudiments of writing (fiction or otherwise) there's a laboratory course which should be a help in gaining the real professional touch—Thursdays from 8:30 to 9:30 p. m. By the time you have reached this advanced stage, you should be sending off manuscripts here and there and, possibly seeing a few of your purple passages in print.

The "Y" also features, more in the line of pure fun, contest writing ("Why I Like Munchie Crunchies" in 10 words or less) and greeting card verse writing. The latter, particularly is a highly profitable hobby, and the course especially emphasizes where to sell 'em and what's most likely to succeed.

Students in any of the magazine writing classes are eligible to join the "Y" Professional Writer's Club, which has been busily inspiring its members to write stories, articles and such for some seven years.

More on the vocational than avocational side are the courses at the Graduate School of the Department of Agriculture. There's straight creative writing, of course, as a basic sort of education in the art, but with Civil Service's needs in mind, the school offers such things as editing, writing for official purposes, writing of documented papers and—this is exciting—a workshop in Government radio programs. The last is a really big course directed toward a tremendous field—meets Monday from 6 to 9 p. m.

American University gives with a course in radio too—from the public lations point of view—and stude s write scripts, plan programs and actually produce their work. Also, there are courses in writing for publication in eneral, with group criticism and personal conferences, as well as some concerned with the mechanics of dissem nating formation. These are of primary interest to those who have Government service in mind and are pretty practical stuff.

George Washington University's journalism courses are not offered this semester, but it might be well to consider going into the matter with thoroughness in a few months. You can study reporting, featu writing, advertising, editorial writing and other types of newspaper and magazine material. The regular composition classes, as well as a class i short story writing, are being offered at George Washington this ar, so investigate one or both of these.

If you know all there is to know about the rules already, or if you want your fresh approach to remain unspoiled by instruction, beg, borrow or steal a copy of "The Writer's Market" and find out the best ways and places to sell your masterpieces. The book costs three dollars and gives the name, address, rate of payment and requirements of no less than 2500 publishers (of books, magazines, and what have you) who buy manuscripts from free-lance writers. If you can't find the book locally, send $4 to Writer's Digest, 22 East 12th st., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Even if you don't make a fortune at this writing business, you may at least learn how to write fascinating letters to your favorite man—and don't tell us that's not just as essential!

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Here on the home front we still don't know what hardship is. We are living soft and too many of us are soft. If we had to go through what the nurses on Bataan went through, I don't believe we could take it.

Those may sound like harsh words, but it's the way you feel after talking with First Lieut. Eunice Hatchitt, Army nurse, back home from the horror of the historic island fortress. Let's just contrast living there during those last days with our so-called deprivations.

The food rationing is terrible, isn't it? Well, on Bataan the main dish, for months, was rice and very little else. "The fact that it was unpolished rice is probably what saved us. But you can't live on that kind of food," the lieutenant stated bluntly. I don't mean the nurses as much as the fighting men. We all starved to death. Was I hungry? You bet I was hungry. Food was the thing we missed most."

In a few weeks she lost 9 pounds—that's one way to reduce! The 9 pounds may not seem like a great deal until you hear that she is 5 feet 5¼ inches tall, and considers 118 pounds normal weight.

Most of us regard taking care of one sick person as quite a job. Before the days of the invasion, Lieutenant Hatchitt, along with other nurses, averaged caring for 30 to 40 patients. Afterward, she cared for as many as 200 a day. "We learned to do in 2 minutes what we had taken 5 to 10 minutes to do," she told me. "We all seemed to have superhuman strength."

Lieutenant Hatchitt went into the Army before calisthenics was included as the basic training for nurses, but, thanks to an uncle who was a retired military man, she grew up understanding the importance of good posture and an interest in tennis and swimming. She is as erect and trim as any of the movie stars playing in "So Proudly We Hail," the picture for which Uncle Sam appointed her technical adviser. By the way, you can catch a glimpse of her in the movie. She is the nurse who applies the dressing on Walter Abel's wound.

Nurses in the armed forces have a chance to see as much action as the fighting men in this war, and there is a serious need for them. The Army alone needs 50,000, Lieutenant Hatchitt stated, and here are the qualifications: Age, between 20 and 35; a graduate of an accredited nursing school; registered nurse, and health.

That last is something we can all check into.

About Washington . . .

AS MEMBERS of Congress go, 38-year-old Representative J. William Fulbright obviously is younger fry. In terms of seniority, he hasn't any; for he came to Congress only last year. Yet, since a certain day last February when he pitched into Clare Boothe Luce's first speech attacking Vice President Wallace's "globaloney," he has held a position of much more importance than usually is accorded a congressional first termer . . . and with his peace resolution coming up for debate yesterday in the House of Representatives, the Capital definitely became Fulbright-conscious. "Do you know the Arkansas Congressman with the new peace plan?" . . . "What type is he?" . . . "Is he a statesman, or just another publicity-seeking politician?" Questions of that [illegible], through at least one important off-the-record gathering that included a number of notables yesterday afternoon.

J. W. Fulbright

I was asking some of those same questions myself not long ago when I happened to be talking to a former Arkansas traveler who has known "Bill" Fulbright since they were fellow students at the University of Arkansas. . . . And from what I gathered Fulbright is one prophet who is completely with honor in the eyes of his own countrymen.

"Bill's a wonder; always was," said his one-time classmate. He played football, lettered in tennis, headed the student body . . . and still managed to graduate at 19, and win a Rhodes scholarship. A long time after that, he came back to Arkansas—the same 'Bill' he was when he left; unaffected, unassuming, and sober—a thinker, who didn't waste his time with small talk. You can depend on it that his 'lasting peace" resolution has been carefully thought-out. He has been pondering over it for at least a decade."

Well, I wouldn't know about that. But a few glimpses of Fulbright from the press gallery have led me to believe he is, indeed, a man of sober and unassuming mien. He rarely smiles. He has blue-gray eyes, dark hair and a dimple in his chin. He hasn't Hollywood dash, but is clean-cut and handsome in a grade-A American way; dresses well, but not conspicuously; talks convincingly and wastes no words.

He and Mrs. Fulbright—the former Elizabeth Williams of Philadelphia, whom he met here in 1932—make their home at 2101 Connecticut ave. They have two small daughters—Elizabeth, 7, and Roberta, 4. Incidentally, Mrs. Fulbright spent most of her time yesterday on Capitol Hill.

HERE AND THERE: Months to come you'll still be hearing reports of that gala reception given Saturday evening by the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels. A brilliant fete for a foreign visitor, as well as a colorful Pan American ball, the event also had all the earmarks of an old home week get-together . . . as returned vacationers and erstwhile official travelers greeted each other like long-lost friends. "A pleasant party—a very pleasant party" one heard on all sides, as more than a thousand guests walked down the receiving line, danced or watched others dancing in the flag-draped ballroom, and the went down to the tropical patio where a moving mass of dignitaries—foreign and domestic—lingered until long after midnight.

Eleanor Martin, the widely known portrait painter, who took off to Ottawa for a vacation a month ago, is back at her studio apartment at 1606 Twentieth st. She went up to the Canadian capital for a rest, and a visit with the Edward Lawtons of our legation there, but as is usually the case with the talented and energetic Eleanor, she soon found herself working away . . . even while on vacation. Among the portraits she finished was that of Mrs. Ralph Letson, wife of the former Canadian Military Attache here. She also did a sketch of Mrs. Ray Atherton, wife of the new United States Minister at Ottawa.

Six months ago James H. R. Cromwell was only a shadow of his current self. In other words he now tips the scales 30 pounds heavier than at that time. He looks the picture of health now; admits he had to work pretty hard—and rigidly observe a diet—to take on any weight at all. "But once I got going—well, I'm still going strong." . . . Ralph J. Totten, former U. S. envoy to South Africa, is in Canada for his annual bear and moose hunt. "I'm hoping to add a few hundred pounds to the Nation's meat supply," he said as he left a few days ago. He'll be back the middle of October . . . The United Nations Club—one of our town's most thriving organizations—may soon have a clubhouse all its own. It should. Proof it has done a good job is borne out by each successful weekly party, such as the one at the Cafritz home the past Sunday. The "moving forces" behind that club deserve a lot of credit . . . and permanent headquarters as well.

Peruvian to Make Special Study in U. S.

An engineer by profession and now a representative of the Province of Pisco at his country's House of Representatives, Federico Uranga of Peru says he is particularly interested during his present visit to the United States in making a study of dams and irrigation systems.

In a country such as Peru, where only 3 per cent of the coast is naturally and properly watered, the problem of irrigation is no doubt a vital one. The obvious solution seemed to be the damming of a series of lakes on the high plateaus of the Andes, so that, when crops are being sown in the spring—June, July and August—water from these reservoirs may be used for irrigation.

Dangerous Country To Build Dams

But these lakes are generally from 12,000 to 15,000 feet above sea level in a region not only subject to volcanic vibrations but also to great changes of temperature—as much as 50 degrees centigrade, sometimes — which makes the building of the usual model of modern dam particularly dangerous, even when the large sums of money necessary to make these are available.

"So we started wondering," Senor Uranga said, during a recent interview at the Pan American Union, "we started wondering how the Incas, masters in the art of irrigation, had tackled the problem and why they, the great stone builders, had not used stone containers to retain their water supply."

Organized the Cooperative Societies

The result of their research was a new model dam, made of earth, or rather of a concrete wall completely surrounded and protected by earth. When, as is often the case, the money for such a project cannot be raised, Senor Uranga has devised a new and simplified system in which, by means of a vertical cut in the wall of the lake, he manages to create an artificial passageway for the water needed for irrigation.

Senor Uranga turned again to the Incas for inspiration when, going out of his engineering field, he organized more than 100 cooperative societies in the Indian communities of Peru. The founder of the Rural Association of Peru and the author of his country's organic law on cooperative systems, Senor Uranga firmly believes that Peru's "freedom from want" depends essentially on the interest of the Indian majority in the economic life of the country. "Such an interest is aroused only by using the cooperative principle, a principle understandable to the Indian and found in his background and tradition, joint-stock associations having been the base of the economic system of the Incan Empire."

Mrs. Churchill Visited National Gallery; Mary Danced at the Shoreham

By Marie McNair

That illustrous family, the Churchills—Prime Minister Winston, Mrs. Churchill and Subaltern Mary Churchill—have landed safely in England. That's not news now. But they made news with a capital N during their stay of more than a fortnight at the White House and Churchill stories are still going the rounds.

The sparkling Mrs. Churchill and pretty Mary made deep impressions on all who had the good fortune to meet them, and they did manage to get around a bit during their stay here.

Mrs. Churchill visited many of Washington's historic spots and its monuments to culture. She toured the National Gallery of Art and it was there that she experienced that timeworn incident which, it seems, comes to everybody with any claim to fame. A curious visitor at the gallery approached her with the remark: "Did anyone ever tell you how much you look like Mrs. Churchill?" And the answer, "Y-Yes—you see I AM Mrs. Churchill."

Visits British War Relief Shop

With rosy-cheeked Mary Churchill, in the Auxiliary Territorial Service uniform which she wears so well, Mrs. Churchill went one afternoon to the British War Relief Shop up on Columbia rd. The visit wasn't a complete surprise, for the head of the shop had time to telephone to several members of the organization to get there in a hurry to give their distinguished caller a real welcome.

Mrs. Churchill looked carefully at everything there was on sale, finally ended by buying two make-up bags. "Are you sure you are asking the right amount for these," she said. "They're so lovely and so cheap."

Then she chatted for awhile with several of the women and told them what the work of the British War Relief Society had meant to them at home. When Britain was on the defensive, she said, those huge boxes filled with clothing, medicine, etc., arriving from the United States, were like bundles from Heaven. Everywhere she went, in hospitals, hostels, child shelters, homes, Mrs. Churchill found something in use that had come from America. Now, with England on the offensive, those boxes, still coming over, are like old friends.

Mary Churchill At Shoreham

Mary Churchill has been seeing a bit of Washington after dark, and the other evening supper guests at the Shoreham found themselves staring at Subaltern Mary being twirled about the dance floor in the arms of Maj. Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr. Oddly enough, it wasn't the Churchill - Vanderbilt combination that attracted the attention. It was Subaltern Churchill's slip—it showed a good inch, Neily's friends told him later.

Major Vanderbilt, incidentally, who was in Walter Reed Hospital most of last winter, is now a newspaper columnist, and also a member of Russell Birdwell's public relations firm. "I stay up all night getting news," he says, "and they call me at dawn to ask if I've checked my sources." It's a great life!

She was attended by her sister, Miss Rita Pumple, who wore pink chiffon, and Miss Clemmy MacDonald, sister of the bridegroom, who wore blue chiffon. Both carried bouquets of white gladioli.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McDonald of Ottawa, had as his best man Corpl. Stuart McIntosh, RCAF. Ushers were Corpl. Bill Jackson, RCAF, and Sergt. Ken Tatten, RCAF.

Thai Legation Honors King's Anniversary

In another era when Washington had a "social season," it was usually ushered in by the reception at the Thai Legation to celebrate the birthday anniversary of their King. It was the first large party of the season and was the occasion for old friends to meet again after a summer at the mountains or the sea.

Yesterday the anniversary was celebrated in quite different fashion. There was a party at the legation, but there was only a handful of guests, and included only those who have special interest in Thailand, or have visited there.

According to custom, the Minister and Mme. Pramoj had their eldest son put in appearance during the afternoon, for in their native country they believe in children learning the graces of hospitality at an early age. Seri, who is 10, was there yesterday only long enough to greet the guests and then departed for play with his younger brother, Usni.

Francis Sayre, former High Commissioner of the Philippines, and Mrs. Sayre were among those enjoying this pleasant party, and others were Dr. and Mrs. Errett C. Albritton, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Peck, Mr. and Mrs. Holbrook Chapman, Mme. Georges-Picot, Dr. and Mrs. K. P. Landon, Dr. Kenneth Wells, John McClure, Mr. and Mrs. Scholtz, Miss Hilda Cuniff, Dr. Viehover, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Praeger and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Coolidge.

The boy ruler of Thailand, His Majesty King Ananta, whose portrait hangs on the legation wall, was 17 years old yesterday. He is now living in exile in Switzerland with his mother, Her Royal Highness Mahidol.

Vice President Wallace was among the guests and others included the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre, the American Ambassador to Chile, Claude Bowers; the Argentine Ambassador, Don Feliepe Espil; the Ambassador of Brazil, Carlos Martins; Gen. Oscar Dutra, Brazilian Minister of War, who is here on a return visit; Senator To mConnally, Representative Sol Bloom, Special Chilean Ambassador Felix Nieto del Rio, and another Special Ambassador from Chile, Pedro Alvarez; Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, former American Ambassador to Chile Col. William S. Culbertson, Vice Admiral Vicente Merino, George T. Summerlin, Gen. Oscar Fuentes, head of the Chilean Military Mission; Laurence Duggan, Dr. Eduardo Salazar, Minister-Counselor of the Ecuadorian Embassy; Warren Lee Pierson, Wing Comdr. Raul Gonzalez, head of the Chilean Air Mission; Philip Bonsal and Mario Rodriguez, Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Florencia Garcia. Senor Fernandez Fernandez will be guest at a luncheon to be given today by the Brazilian Ambassador.

Dr. Fernandez Fernandez to Be Guest of Brazilian Ambassador at Luncheon

On Saturday, the distinguished visitor was honored by the Governing Board of the Pan American Union at a special session followed by a luncheon in the Hall of the Americas. The Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, as chairman of the board presided and made a brief speech of welcome to their guest.

Entertained at Luncheon Saturday

In reply Senor Fernandez Fernandez said: "It was a thoughtful courtesy on your part, to have your welcome to me on this my first visit to the home of the Pan American Union fall upon the national holiday of Chile. This happy coincidence emphasizes the fraternal aspect of your greeting, and will be interpreted by the Chilean people as another expression of unity of principles and ideals in this hour of proof and common sacrifices.

The 18th of September symbolizes not only the historical dates on which each of our sister republics celebrates the anniversary of her political emancipation, but also our faith in liberty, in democracy, and in continental unity, because it commemorates one of the fundamental phases of the long struggle against absolutism. The cry of independence uttered by the people of Chile in 1810, preceded or followed by that of other American nations, was an expression of the spirit of solidarity that even then reigned in this hemisphere. No one is ignorant of the fact that the intellectual and military leaders of that great revolutionary movement kept before them the glorious example of the United States. To them the Constitution signed in Philadelphia was a handbook of democracy, and the names of Franklin, Jefferson and George Washington also served as guides in their work of emancipation."

Chile Is Conscious Of Obligations

"Our founding fathers wished and tried to establish the same two principles upon which American unity is today based: solidarity and good neighborliness . . ."

"I do not intend to analyze here the international policy of Chile. Our posititon is well known to be the result of thought and consciousness of our duties. That position was not taken solely because of the personal sentiments of our government, but rather because Chilean democracy is characterized by a capacity for understanding that was reflected in public opinion after President Rfos had spoken on repeated occasions and after its Congress had informed it of events imposing upon Chile the moral obligation to take one step more, the decisive step, in the task of collaborating for defense.

"It is not through vanity, but through justifiable pride, that I claim Chile to be a nation conscious of its obligations, a political entity having a democratic machinery capable of deciding when and how to play its proper role in its relations with other nations. So, through conviction and loyalty, and in keeping with its continuous tradition, Chile has joined the United Nations, has identified itself with them, and is collaborating and will continue increasingly to collaborate, in order to bring about the triumph of the four fundamental freedoms that all the American republics long to see reestablished."

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Where do you find busy club women these days? From one end of town to the other, in and out of organizations—they are "Backing the Attack" with war bonds. Those who can't stump, man booths or track down prospective purchasers, are digging down into their own much-called-on pocketbooks and buying bonds and stamps. Yet, the majority are selling and buying. It's amazing—the hard work clubdom puts into fund-launching drives.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Always a step ahead, no sooner do the clubgoers launch one project than they are knee deep in another. For example, busy club leaders are stepping behind the Community War Fund's campaign for $4,800,000 opening next month. In order to acquaint the club leaders with the massive program, the education committee of the Community War Fund, headed by Mrs. Jouett Shouse, is staging a series of weekly office buffet luncheons. Second of the series is being held today in the National Press Building.

Washington's Community War Fund is part of a great national movement going on all over the country. This month, in every State, every county and every town throughout the Nation, women's organization will do their part in working for similar campaigns for humanity.

In Washington, the money needed by national agencies and relief agencies for our fighting allies will be raised by Community War Fund—the local affiliate of the National War Fund.

Washington has 112 home-front agencies which must be aided again this year and aided with more money than they have ever received before if this city is to do its part in maintaining the home front. In addition, 19 organizations serving our men and women in service and 14 relief agencies for our fighting allies are part of the local campaign.

Attending the education luncheon today will be Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, the federations' first vice president; Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, president, and Mrs. S. Otis Bland, program chairman of Congressional Women's Club; Mrs. James Hammond, president of Bethesda Women's Club; Miss Marjorie Webster, president, and Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, program chairman of the Business and Professional Women's Club; Mrs. George A. Finch, president, and Mrs. Sidney Morgan, chairman of public welfare of Chevy Chase Women's Club; Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president, and Mrs. James K. McClintock, program chairman, of Twentieth Century Club.

Also invited next Tuesday are representatives of Randolph-Macon College Alumnae Association, Elmir College Club, Goucher College Alumnae Association, Smith College Alumnae Association, Vassar College Alumnae Association, the Wellesley Club of Washington, Wheaton College Club, Washington Alliance of Delta Delta Delta, Mount Holyoke College Alumnae Club and Bryn Mawr College Club.

An even dozen women's organizations were represented at the first of Community War Fund's educational division's luncheon last Tuesday. The representation included Mrs. Clinton L. Doggett, chairman of special work for the American Association of University Women; Mrs. Harriet Chambers, president, and Dr. Frances Moon Butts of the D. C. branch of the League of American Pen Women; Mrs. Robert Whitelaw Wilson, president, and Mrs. John B. Martin, jr., education chairman of Junior League; Mrs. Eugene Duffield, president, and Mrs. Walter Laves program chairman of the Voteless League of Women Voters; Miss Elizabeth Cullen, president, and Mrs. Bernice Jay, program chairman of Quota Club; Miss Mildred Clum, president, and Mrs. Lina Pond, civics chairman of Soroptimist Club; Mrs. Harold Walbridge Robbins, president, and Mrs. Richard A. Allen, chairman of benevolent work, and Miss Maud Snead of United Daughters of the Confederacy; Mrs. J. Parker Van Zandt, program chairman of Washington Club; Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president, and Miss Etta Mae Russell, executive secretary of the Washington Council of Church Women; Mrs. Fred R. Sanderson, president, and Mrs. M. A. MacDonald, program chairman of the Women's Auxiliary to the Medical Society; Mrs. Gladys B. ## Discussion Series Gets Underway

Sixty women, representing about 40 organizations, gathered at the Sulgrave Club recently to map out plans for the United Nations Discussions Series programs for the fall and winter. Recommended topics is Postwar Planning—including rehabilitation, trade, economics, transportation, natural resources, defending the peace and numerous others.

Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, vice chairman of the women's division of the series, opened the meeting and announced the resignation of Miss Minnie Mae Flemming as chairman of the Washington lecture series. In short order a nominating committee named Mrs. Henry F. Grady to succeed Miss Flemming, who resigned on account of ill health.

Mrs. Grady, the principal speaker of the day, founded the Latin-American Lecture Series that evolved into last season's United Nations Discussion Series at Constitution Hall.

OH, THAT MAN!

By Betty Clarke — Associated Press Feature Writer

Men are forever complaining about women's beauty ills. What about men? A good inventory of their own grooming faults wouldn't harm them a bit.

The lordly male is quick to criticize a dress that is too taut, too long or too short; a slip that shows or a trailing hair on the shoulder; lipstick too heavily applied or fingernails too long or too red

Most men neglect their fingernails It is not unusual to see an executive with dirty fingernails. It is an almost everyday occurrance to seee men who need a haircut so obviously they resemble French poodles. Some look as if they had never seen a razor blade or a shoeshine cloth.

The worst offenders of warm-weather perspiration effects are men. Yet there probably isn't one in a thousand who would be tempted to visit his corner drugstore and buy a preventative.

Frayed shirts, worn and ragged shoelaces and ties with speckles of yesterday morning's soft-boiled egg are a few more common signs

Color combinations are something the average man knows very little about. Without the aid of his wife, who on occasions may give him a few gentle hints, he might appear in public in white socks trailing down over his shoes, a yellow tie and a green suit.

There's Magic In Jars

By Margaret George

If Lady Macbeth only had known the formula for this remarkable skin blemish preparation, she wouldn't have had sleepless nights. But, unfortunately for her, this miracle-working potion wasn't conceived until the twentieth century.

If you're one of the countless hundreds of men and women afflicted with disfiguring scars, birthmarks or other skin blemishes, you may already know about this preparation. It isn't new. It's been available for several years past, and we're talking about it again only for the benefit of those who may not already have discovered it.

What Is It?

We can't tell you what goes into this cream—that's a trade secret. But it is recommended and prescribed for all types of blemishes involving the pigment of the skin—burns, birthmarks, acne (first stages), varicose veins. Even for dark circles under the eyes! It completely disguises the blemish and stays put until you remove it. It won't crack and it won't rub off.

How It's Used:

It comes in five shades to correspond with varying skin tones, and you select the shade which most nearly matches your own complexion. You rub the stuff into the blemished area and one inch beyond. Keep adding until the blemish is concealed, taking care to blend the edges. If it's a facial blemish you're concealing, pat on plenty of powder and allow it to dry for 10 minutes. Pat off excess powder. That's all there is to it. (Comes in two sizes: about $1.25 and $3.)

Recommended for Children:

Nothing in the world is more apt to give a child an inferiority complex than a blemished skin. Children who have disfiguring birthmarks on their faces can be saved years of agony by the daily use of this preparation. For occasional pimples and minor blemishes, the same company puts out a convenient stick form. (A handy item for all women, too, who are subject to occasional facial blemishes).

Additional Preparations:

And that's not all! Many a blue-bearded man swears by the preparation designed to cover up the grayish tone left on the face after shaving (something over $1).

There are also special powders and rouges which come in the same shades as the blemish coverupper. And for swimmers, the same house puts out waterproof preparations which will remain intact. The regular product, however, withstands perspiration and a normal amount of water.

It would be even more wonderful if modern science had perfected a method of completely removing disfiguring marks. But that's still in the future. Meanwhile, this covering preparation is pretty wonderful in its own right.

Patterson Declares Confiscatory Taxes Only Bolster Inflation; Opposes Repeal of Contract Renegotiation Law

By the Associated Press

Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, gave a new slant yesterday to congressional studies of new taxes and possible changes in the war contract renegotiation law by declaring higher taxes on war contractors would "add fuel to the fires of inflation."

He told the House Ways and Means Committee that "confiscatory taxes may eliminate excessive profits but will inevitably result in wastage of manpower and materials." He opposed repeal of the renegotiation law, under which "excessive profits" in war contracts are recovered.

Meanwhile a joint statement from the War, Navy and Treasury Departments and the Maritime Commission stated that the renegotiation of war contracts during August eliminated $448,253,000 in excess profits.

Excess profits totaling $4,404,108,000 now have been recovered through actual repayment or in reduction of current contract prices, the agencies reported.

In the 18 months since price adjustment boards were authorized commitments for $2,141,366,000 in cash refunds had been obtained, and price reductions savings totaled $2,262,742,000, the report said.

Representatives of the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers recommended to the committee last week that the recapture provisions of renegotiation be suspended or repealed, and that excessive profits be recovered through the tax laws.

"This committee," Patterson said, "fully recognizes and understands that, when taxes are carried to the point of confiscation of earnings over and above any given level, the profit incentive necessarily disappears and resultant extravagance, with widespread waste of manpower and materials, inevitably follows."

"The committee fully understands that until the point of actual 100 per cent taxation is reached, the higher the tax rates the greater the incentive to increase prices and gross profits—this in order to increase the total of dollars left to the taxpayer after payment of of his taxes."

One leading congressional tax authority, who asked that he not be quoted directly, said Patterson had expressed "a new tax philosophy," and recalled that other statements from administration quarters had indicated increased taxes were needed all along the line to curb inflation.

Members of the committee said they regarded the Undersecretary's statement as unusually significant in view of the fact they expect to open hearings, probably next week, on a new general revenue bill which probably will embrace new record levies.

There also is a guessing game on Capitol Hill as to what the Administration will propose in the way of collecting new revenue.

Patterson said he believed continuance of the statute for the duration of the war "is in the public interest."
